Navy Planning Warships Up to 52,000 Tons, Stark Asserts

Admiral Testifies Larger Vessels are Not 'Indicated'

OUTLINES AIMS

2 Battleships Now Contemplated to be in 45,000-Ton Class

Washington—(AP)—Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, disclosed today that present studies "indicate" the navy will build 50,000 or 52,000-ton battleships. Larger vessels, he said, are not indicated.

Stark gave this information to the house naval committee in response to questions as to what he thought of talk in congressional circles about building super-battleships of 70,000 or 80,000 tons.

Stark also revealed that the two battleships for which President Roosevelt last week asked initial funds would be "practically" sister ships of the two 45,000-ton battleships for which congress voted starting funds last year. A house appropriations subcommittee is already at work on the president's latest request.

"Four such ships would be perfectly splendid, high-speed units," Stark said. He testified the four vessels were designed to have a speed of 33 knots.

"We are satisfied there is nothing on the ways in any way superior to what we have building or in contemplation," he asserted. Stark's explanation of present construction plans made it plain that the navy does not contemplate starting any 50,000 or 52,000-ton ships this year.

Remarks that there has been "much talk" of the advantages of "62,000-ton battleships," Stark said that in his opinion they would be "either too big or not big enough."

He did not explain his remark.

Most naval officers who have been studying the question closely, he said, "leaned very much toward continuing our own program" and were not in favor of "rushing into something that looks very attractive on paper."

"The navy has not by any means been asleep on this question," the fleet's highest-ranking officer declared.

Advantage in Numbers

Comparing the advantages and disadvantages of super-battleships, Stark remarked that while a bigger craft obviously would be superior to an individual smaller ship, it would also be remembered that there is some advantage in numbers.

"A ship can be in only one place at a time," he said, adding that there had been an example of this fact in the south Atlantic recently. He apparently referred to the defeat of the German "pocket battleship," Admiral Graf Spee, by three smaller British cruisers.

Bigger ships, Stark said, would present a greater target area for torpedoes, mines, bombs and guns. They would be able to get through the proposed new locks of the Panama canal, but Stark said that if the new locks happened to be jammed, they would be a problem.

Two Murder Trials to Be Conducted at Antigo

Antigo—(AP)—Langlade county's two pending first degree murder cases will be tried in circuit court during the week beginning Jan. 29.

On that date James Blaine Skidmore, 50, will go to trial on a charge of murdering Orville Nass, 20.

When this trial is completed, the court will take up the case of Willie Cook, 31, charged with murdering William Warnick, eccentric woodsman known locally by the name of John Smith.

The dates were fixed yesterday by Judge Joseph R. McCarthy, who took office last week at the age of 31 as the youngest circuit judge in Wisconsin history.

Truth at Any Price

In a certain country inhabited by savage tribes, the natives believe a man's veracity can be proven by his ability to enter a pool of crocodiles and successfully swim across. This is their quaint way of gaining confessions and settling neighborly disputes. Feeding a man to the alligators merely to find out whether or not he actually "swam up with a crocodile" the night before, seems to be rather an extreme method to apply, but it probably would be more effective than a wife in "third degree" at that!

In civilized countries lie detectors and chemical mixtures are used to extract the truth just as the want ads are used to fill rental vacancies. It's the quick, economical, up-to-date thing to do!

Expect House to Pass Anti-Lynch Bill Wednesday

Debate Today Not Likely To Change Result of Vote on Measure

Washington—(AP)—House members from the north and the south reached down into their dictionaries today for words to laud and lambast the anti-lynching bill, a recurring issue in election years.

The debate, bringing the chamber into session an hour early was expected to avoid nothing more than to put the participants on record for political use.

The measure is certain of house passage, probably tomorrow. It won the right to consideration yesterday 225 to 114, and will be sent to the senate by about the same margin.

After that, it faces a stiff going-over from southern senators—the same group which filibustered a similar bill to death in 1938.

The senate, not concerned with the anti-lynching bill just yet, is in recess today, but is expected to give its blessing tomorrow to a sweeping, special study of the nation's fiscal affairs.

Senator McNary of Oregon, the Republican leader, who blocked senate approval of the proposition yesterday, was reported to have come to terms with Senator Harrison (D-Miss.), the author. McNary wanted the study to include national defense costs.

Harrison's proposal would set up a 24-man committee to study both the source of revenue and prospective government spending to determine whether Uncle Sam can get by this year on less money.

House leaders remained cool to the idea, principally because it would interfere with their plans to pass an appropriation bill a week for the next several weeks.

Gets Prison Sentence for Harboring Fugitives

New York—(AP)—Carl Shapiro, brother of Jacob "Gurrah" Shapiro, racketeer partner of Louis "Lepke" Buchalter, was sentenced today to a year and a day in the federal penitentiary on his conviction of conspiring to harbor his brother and Lepke while they were fugitives from justice.

Shapiro and four others were convicted Nov. 6.

Federal Judge Grover M. Moscovitz imposed the following sentences on the others: Florence Dwyer, of Baltimore, secretary of the Raleigh Manufacturers, Inc., of Baltimore, a suspended sentence and six-months probation; Philip Kasakove, the firm's accountant, a year and a day with execution of the sentence suspended, and a two-year probationary period; Samuel Smith of Baltimore, brother-in-law of Gurrah and treasurer of the corporation, six months; and Nathan Borish of Vineland, N. J. president, a year and a day.

State Department Special Committee to Make Study Of War and Peace Problems

Washington—(AP)—The economic problems which the European war poses for the United States and which peace will raise in the future are to be studied by a special state department committee.

Undersecretary Sumner Welles was designated last night to be chairman of the advisory group on problems of foreign relations. Hugh Wilson, former ambassador to Germany, was made vice chairman.

"The war," said the state department announcer, "has brought about and is continuing to bring about a series of measures and policies on the part of both belligerents and neutrals which immediately affect the United States and which may have consequences of an enduring nature upon our country's foreign relations once peace is established."

"Some of the most important and immediate of these measures and policies are in the field of economic activity and relations. The war has absorbed the labor and production of much of the world in armament and military activity. When the war ends, problems of readjustment to peace-time production will be presented, which may gravely affect the United States."

A department official said the formation of the committee did not mean necessarily that the department believed European peace was near. He recalled recent statements by Secretary Hull that the United States had a vital interest in the type of peace that would develop, and desired a peace which would eliminate, if possible, causes for future wars.

As the department prepared for the adjustments which may follow the termination of the war, Senator Nye (R-N. D.), a leader in the unsuccessful fight against repeal of the arms embargo last fall, said he would seek re-enactment of a ban on shipment of munitions to warring countries.

Main Struggle Still to Come, Chamberlain Says; Pledges Aid to Finland

Help to be 'No Mere Formality,' Prime Minister Asserts; Warns of 'Quiet of the Calm Before the Storm' and Hails Naval Triumphs

London—(AP)—(Via Radio)—Prime Minister Chamberlain in a militant address to the British empire today declared Britain's aid to Finland "will be no mere formality," and said that events in the war with Germany thus far were "merely preliminary" to the main struggle to come.

"It is only on the sea," he said, "that the war may be said to be in full operation."

The prime minister, speaking in a voice choked with emotion, declared that the British-French alliance should become permanent in the interests of "peaceful reconstruction" after the war is over.

For 55 minutes, Britain's war leader reviewed the progress of the hostilities to date in an address at the lord mayor's luncheon at Mansion house. It was Chamberlain's first public appearance of the new year, a year he said would be a fateful one in the history of the world.

"Unbelievable" Quiet

He said the "unbelievable" quiet of the first months of the war could only be interpreted as "the quiet of the calm before the storm."

The solemn words of the prime minister were interrupted frequently by cheers and applause.

(His speech was broadcast in the United States over the NBC, CBS and Mutual networks.)

Speaking of Finland, Chamberlain said: "And now it is the turn of Finland to be attacked by the power (Soviet Russia) with whom Germany made an unholy pact and for whom she sets the example of aggression. Finland... is fighting against the forces of unscrupulous violence just as we are ourselves. She is fighting for the same thing, for liberty and for justice."

"That valiant people can rest assured that our response to that resolution (for aid to Finland) which was passed so recently at a meeting of the league in Geneva will be no mere formality."

Assaults Nazi Chiefs

Chamberlain said bitterly that the leaders of the German people would like to treat the British as they are treating "their conquered people."

"But we on our side have no such vindictive designs," he said. He labeled as a "vicious invention" of German propagandists the thought that the British would attempt to annihilate the Germans.

He described Germany's policy as a threat and a menace "to the moral standards on which western civilization is built."

Chamberlain declared that Britain's mastery of the seas was unimpaired and that England was ready to repel any invader from the air.

"Four months have gone by and the air raids have not come," he said. Turn to page 13 col. 5

Nazi Planes Bomb Eleven Vessels

33 Men Wounded in Attack; Danish Ship Is Reported Sunk

London—(AP)—Thirty-three men were wounded, mostly by machine-gun fire, and one Danish vessel was bombed and sunk as German warplanes were reported to have attacked 11 ships off Britain's coast today.

Crews on the cliffs of the north-east Scottish coast saw a bomb hit the stern of a Danish vessel, which sank in about three hours. The crew of this ship, the name of which was not disclosed, was rescued by nearby vessels.

So near the coast was part of the encounter that onlookers heard the rattle of machine-guns.

Under the cover of mists, the Nazi planes attacked two ships off the east coast of Scotland and two further south. There was no serious damage reported but one man was injured slightly.

Two Heinkels attacked a fifth ship, which was damaged by bomb and machine-gun fire. The crew, which was due to the poor visibility, was rescued by a British vessel.

A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch from Amsterdam today reported the 176-ton Dutch motorship Truidra struck a mine and sank near the Noordhinder lightship. The crew of four was saved.

Berlin—(AP)—German planes scouting along the English and Scottish coasts today attacked and destroyed several armed patrol ships and merchant vessels. They were continuing, DNB, official German news agency, announced.

DIES AT 101

Green Bay—(AP)—Theodore Reynen, who was 101 years old, died yesterday. He came to Bay Settlement from the Netherlands in 1852, and farmed. A son, William, survives.

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, chairman of the committee on public relations of the Southern Baptist convention told reporters afterward that the group had presented their views that church and state should remain separate and that the president "approved our opinion" on that point.

A number of Protestant faiths have protested to the White House that the Taylor appointment was a step toward the union of the church and state. In that connection, Weaver asserted:

"He said he wanted to assure us no church would receive better treatment or greater recognition than another church."

County Road Chiefs Lash At Diversion

Also Oppose Elimination Of Any State Highway Division Offices

PROTEST TO HEIL

Governments Accused of 'Breaking Faith With Their People'

Milwaukee—(AP)—Wisconsin county highway committee, opposing any prospective additional diversion of highway revenues or elimination of any of the nine state highway division offices, were united today in a protest to Governor Heil and state legislators.

The committee voted the protest after they and county highway commissioners heard an attack on highway fund diversion at the opening session of the twenty-ninth annual state road school yesterday.

La Vern Kohn of Juneau, president of the Wisconsin County Highway Commissioners' association, declared:

"Our governments have broken faith with their people by using highway tolls for other purposes, to the amount of many millions over a period of years."

In addition, the committee decided to ask the state highway commission for permission to use ice removal funds to protect "straight-away" dangers as well as well as those on curves and hills.

Commissioners Meet

The commissioners, at a separate meeting, took no action, but the discussion will be resumed at a joint session tomorrow afternoon.

Frank O'Rourke, chairman of the Dodge county highway committee, declared that since the county commissioners and the state highway commission members are "hired help," they can not do as much to fight diversion as can the committee-men, who are elected county board supervisors.

O'Rourke advised committee-men to confer with state legislators. He advocated a "well-rounded highway system" that would give men work.

"What we want," he said, "is a 365-day road. We live in a great dairy state. If the milk doesn't go to market today, it spoils."

"If money is raised for highway purposes, spend it for that. If you don't need it, cut the gas tax."

Diverted Fund Lost

O'Rourke said that no effort should be made to get back $27,000,000 in highway revenues already diverted—in the state's present financial straits.

Admit Tampering With Rail Tracks

Four Children Ordered to Appear Tomorrow in Juvenile Court

Marquette—(AP)—Four children who admitted to County Judge William F. Haase that they tampered with Milwaukee road rails and signal wires at Pound were ordered to appear with their parents tomorrow in juvenile court.

The children, 7 to 16 years of age and all residents of Pound, confessed yesterday they had committed the vandalism New Year's day.

Nine railroad spikes were driven between track joints, and 32 sets of bond wires for two electric wig-wag crossing signals were pulled out of place so that wheels of a passing train would sever them. The route is followed by the Chippewa, Milwaukee road flier.

A freight train and four passenger trains passed over the damaged section. The freight train, moving slowly, came first and merely flattened the wires. Road officials said this probably averted a serious accident. A speeding passenger train would have cut the wires, they added.

Under questioning, the boys said they tampered with the track "to see what would happen."

The children were apprehended by E. J. Mac Mahon, Green Bay special agent, and Under Sheriff Edward O'Hearon.

Roosevelt Silent On 3rd Term; Aids Want Him to Run

What Democratic Speakers Said at Jackson Day Fetes

President Roosevelt, in Washington, the future lies with those wise political leaders who realize that the great public is interested more in government than in politics; that the independent vote in this country has been steadily on the increase.

Secretary Wallace, at Des Moines: "I hope that the nominee in 1940 will be President Roosevelt."

Solicitor General Jackson, at Cleveland: "Why not let Mr. Roosevelt know the other fellow's plans before he decides (about a third term), instead of letting the other fellows know his plans so they can decide?"

Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, at Raleigh, N. C.: "The things for which Franklin D. Roosevelt has given his best must not be allowed to perish."

Governor Herbert H. Lehman, in New York: "Americans of all creeds must heed and respond to the call of the president for peace and the preservation of democratic principles."

Governor Henry Horner of Illinois, in Chicago: Illinois Democrats should "take the lead" in drafting Mr. Roosevelt for a third term.

John W. Hanes, former treasury undersecretary, in Dallas: "There are signs that, if the abnormal circumstances and conditions abroad do not prevent, we have begun to enjoy what should be a reasonably long and sustained period of good business."

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.), at Denver: "Will the country go back—back to the old guard Republicans—back to the party that saw no corruption and unbridled graft, that heard no pleas from the oppressed and underprivileged who walked the road of starvation, and did nothing?"

Speaker Bankhead, in Washington: "A magnificent program of social reform enacted in the last few years is now beginning to bring its blessings to the American people."

3 G.O.P. Leaders Jeered for Failure To Attend Dinner

President Roosevelt Has Last Laugh at Democratic Gathering

Washington—(AP)—The three Republican leaders of congress had to take a lot of kidding from their colleagues today, for President Roosevelt had the last word—and the last laugh—about their refusal to attend the Democrats' "non-political" dinner on Jackson day.

Senators McNary of Oregon and Austin of Vermont and Representative Martin of Massachusetts had been invited to the $100-a-plate banquet, but they sent regrets.

Mr. Roosevelt could scarcely wait to tell the diners last night about a school teacher who asked her class of small boys how many wanted to go to heaven. Every boy held up his hand—except one. Then, the president continued:

"Teacher said, 'Charlie, Charlie McNary, you don't want to go to heaven? Why not?'"

"Teacher, sure I want to go to heaven, but," he said, pointing to the rest of the boys in the room—not with that bunch."

The president thereupon pointed out solemnly that had the Republicans come, they would have had "nothin' to sign and nothin' to jine."

"There are a lot of riddles in the national capital," he said. "I myself, am supposed to be a self-made riddle—in fact a cross between a riddle and a Santa Claus. . . . But occasionally we get a real riddle like this one about the three empty chairs."

Five Fliers Land on Tiny Atoll in Ocean

Nassau, Bahamas—(AP)—Five young men, Ohio fliers used a tiny atoll in the Atlantic ocean, 100 miles off the Miami, Fla. coast, for a landing place when their plane became disabled high over the water yesterday.

The airman, Robert Myers, Hartford, Arkwright, Ralph Seidner, James Tobin and John Bloom, were picked up uninjured by a rescue amphibian plane and brought here.

Plans were made today to recover the disabled craft with a barge from the thick underbrush of the small island, about 50 miles west of Nassau.

The fliers were participating in the Miami-to-Nassau pleasure cavalcade, which followed completion of the All-American Air Races at Miami.

State Democrats Avoid Stand on Third Term Issue

Praise Roosevelt's Leadership but Do Not Urge Candidacy

Milwaukee—(AP)—Speakers at a Jackson day dinner last night avoided commitments concerning a third term for President Roosevelt but pledged loyalty to the Democratic administration.

Charles E. Broughton of Sheboygan, Democratic national committeeman from Wisconsin, declared:

"If he (Roosevelt) is to be our leader in 1940 it will be one of our happiest moments. If, on the other hand, he desires to retire from his task, it will be our pleasure to support the New Deal and the candidate who has earned his confidence to carry on."

"Tonight I am thinking of two great leaders who have played a major part in directing the New Deal and legislation under its President Roosevelt and Fosterman General Farley. I have been close to Mr. Farley because he is chairman of the national committee, and throughout this administration he has never wavered in his loyalty to the president."

"The national committee will meet in Washington on Feb. 5, and from that day forth it will be my duty to support it."

Bridges Escapes Deportation Case

Perkins Drops Charges as Result of Findings by Special Trial Examiner

Washington—(AP)—The deportation case against Harry Bridges, west coast C. I. O. leader, has been dismissed by Secretary of Labor Perkins, who held that his connection with the Communist party was not established.

By her action last night, Miss Perkins approved the findings submitted by Dean James M. Landis of the Harvard Law school, special trial examiner in the case.

A deportation warrant issued in 1938 charged that Bridges was affiliated with an organization which advocated overthrow of the government by force and violence.

Landis found that Bridges was "energetically radical" in his beliefs, but said evidence did not show "that the methods he seeks to employ to realize them are other than those that the framework of democratic and constitutional government permits."

Bridges, a native of Australia, came to the United States in 1920.

Strike Is Averted at Fish Pier in Boston

Boston—(AP)—A tie-up of operations at Boston's state-owned fish pier, largest of its kind in the world, was averted today when workers who unload fishing craft agreed to try out single-tined forks, decreed by the city health department because three-tined forks punctured the fish excessively.

The 200 handlers, who quit work yesterday, returned as ice-coated trawlers reached port with more than a million pounds of fish.

The workers had agreed the new type forks slowed down their unloading operations and decreased their earnings.

Conceding that they would have to work faster to maintain their previous average pay, the handlers expressed hope that experience might bring greater adeptness with the single-tined fork.

Wallace and Jackson Favor President's Candidacy

JOVIAL SPEECH

Party Leaders Remain in Dark Concerning Roosevelt Plans

Washington—(AP)—President Roosevelt's "plate-side chat" to Jackson day diners, lauding independent political thinking and joshing everyone from Republicans to himself, brought cheers and laughter—but left unanswered today the question of his future plans.

Democratic leaders who heard the chief executive make a jovial and philosophical talk at last night's $100-a-plate celebration interpreted his remarks variously as an indirect bid for a third term, as a valedictory, or merely as a studied effort to "keep 'em guessing."

Most of the party bigwigs laughingly agreed with Mr. Roosevelt's own comment, however, that he was a "self-made riddle" and predicted the riddle would go unsolved for weeks or months.

Even though the president failed to allude to the third term issue, Secretary Wallace, speaking in Des Moines, said flatly he hoped the "nominee in 1940 would be President Roosevelt." And at Cleveland Robert H. Jackson, newly appointed attorney general, came virtually as close to advocating a third term.

Says Actions Count

Frivolity was the keynote of the dinner here, and Mr. Roosevelt was in a story-telling mood. But his speech had some serious moments.

Taking as his theme "by their motives may ye know them," he told his hearers in Washington and at 44 other dinners it was not so much the party to which a leader belonged, but the deeds he performed in the interest of the general welfare that counted.

"People tell me," he went on, "that I hold to party ties less tenaciously than most of my predecessors in the presidency, that I have too many people in my administration who are not active party Democrats."

"I admit the soft impeachment. My answer is that I do believe in party organization, but only in proportion to its proper place in government."

The future, he asserted, lies with those wise political leaders "who realize that the great public is interested more in government than in politics; that the independent vote in this country has been steadily on the increase"

Introduced by Farley

National Chairman James A. Farley, who introduced Mr. Roosevelt, came closest to announcing his own presidential candidacy when he said with a broad smile:

"Follow candidates, ladies and gentlemen."

Homers Cummings, former attorney general and chairman of the dinner, noted he was surrounded "by presidential possibilities and presidential improbabilities," and introduced Vice President Garner as "a salty personality."

Garner, who is an announced candidate for president, declined to make a speech.

All the speakers, including the president, expressed good-natured wonderment as to why Senators McNary and Austin and Representative Martin, Republican leaders, had not accepted free invitations to the dinner.

"Why didn't our guests come?" Mr. Roosevelt asked solemnly. "I Turn to page 13 col. 4

Utah Congressman Raps Committee's Counsel at Inquiry

'There's a Lot of Things You Do I Resent,' Murdock Tells Toland

Washington — (AP)—Representative Murdock (D-Utah), already on record with a complaint of "unfairness" against the house committee investigating the Wagner labor act and its administration, told the committee counsel today that "there's a lot of things you do that I resent."

Murdock, a committeeman, interrupted the attorney, Edmund M. Toland, when Toland showed displeasure at one of the replies given by today's witness, Mrs. Julius Schlegel, 29-year-old attorney in the review division of the labor board, as to how she could summarize thousands of words of testimony for the board without stating findings.

"I simply state what the witnesses said, without stating any conclusions or findings," the witness testified.

"I'm not asking about conclusions," Toland began, but Murdock interrupted him.

"It seems to me the witness' answer was responsive to the question, and, in fairness to her and to the committee, she should be permitted to finish it."

Removed From Record "I'm not trying to stop her," Toland retorted. "I resent the implication."

"And there's a lot of things you do that I resent," Murdock retorted. He ignored Toland's suggestion that Murdock owed him an apology.

Chairman Smith (D-Va.) ruled that the exchange be stricken from the record.

Toland questioned the witness closely as to why the labor board had decided, in a case involving the American Radiator company's plant at Litchfield, Ill., that the company had locked out employees because of their union activity, although the board's trial examiner had decided otherwise and the board itself had reached a tentative decision in accord with his findings.

He asked also whether Mrs. Schlegel had called to the board's attention testimony that Jack Davis, a field examiner for the board, had told company employees he was "working for the C. I. O." and had asked them to testify that the plant had locked them out. "Yes, I did," she said.

"Limited" Conclusions Asked what Chairman J. Warren Madden of the board had had to say about the matter, the witness said she did not remember.

"But the board decided," she continued, "that the merits of the case had not been affected by anything Mr. Davis may have said."

Toland asked Mrs. Schlegel again whether she reached any conclusions in her own mind about the evidence and testimony she reviewed, and coupled with his query this question:

"Do you pass on the credibility of witnesses?"

"Only when it seems clear to me beyond question that one is telling the truth or not the truth," the witness replied.

"So it is a fact that you do make findings and conclusions?"

"Only to that limited extent."

Finns Report Lull On All Fronts in War With Russia

Officials Think Soviet Invaders 'Momentarily Exhausted'

HELSINKI — (AP)—A high Finnish official said today that a lull prevailing on all fronts indicated that the invading Russian forces were "momentarily exhausted" and were gathering strength for a new assault.

The Finnish-Russian war came almost to a standstill on all fronts during the past 48 hours as far as significant military actions were concerned, the Finnish army communiqué indicated.

It was the shortest lull issued by the Finnish command and said:

"Land: Except for patrol and artillery activity, no serious Jan. 8 passed quietly everywhere."

"Sea: No operations."

"Air: On the air front nothing worth mentioning."

"We can't have a victory like yesterday's every day," the official said, "but today's communiqué is very significant."

Yesterday the Finns reported smashing the Russian 44th division, killing thousands of red troops and capturing 1,000.

(Copenhagen dispatches today said that thousands of terrified Russians were roaming aimlessly over Finland's bleak central — eastern front as a result of the defeat of the 44th division. Many were said to be doomed to die from the cold.)

The spokesman said today that he believed no important Russian offensive could be expected for some time.

President K. Kallio received the foreign press at the presidential palace and told them that the Russians had bombed about 100 localities during the first month of the war and dropped nearly 4,000 bombs.

"Although the losses caused are relatively slight, they are of a dreadful nature," Kallio said. "In one month 234 civilians have been killed, 289 seriously injured and 210 slightly wounded."

The president disclosed that anti-aircraft weapons captured from the Russians were being used to strengthen Finland's air defenses.

Asserting that Russia "daily sends her aircraft behind the front to destroy our homes and kill peaceful civilians," Kallio said Finland would be "amply justified" in making

Daladier Faces Crisis as French Parliament Meets to Debate His Conduct in War

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York — (AP)—The convening of the French parliament today, to debate Premier Daladier's conduct of the war thus far under virtual dictatorial powers, may provide a test of just how great a captain of men is the ex-schoolmaster.

The position is such that his accounting for his stewardship will have to be mighty persuasive if he is to avoid having to battle for his authority. This despite the fact that he is the outstanding figure in French public life.

Daladier has with the voted permission of parliament, been writing his own ticket in affairs of state. His word has been law—subject to ultimate check, of course—but still a tremendous power.

Deputies and senators have agreed reluctantly to this one-man show, not because they like it but because it has seemed the most expedient for handling the series of crises which finally plunged Europe into hostilities. They have buried many of the hottest political differences because of the upheaval.

Dislike Situation The war having failed to develop any real fighting, however, parliament and many of the public have begun to chafe under the near dictatorship. That form of government is entirely alien to the Frenchman's democratic spirit.

Dislike of the situation has been accentuated recently, the word having been quietly passed by Daladier's critics that he likes his present status. They say that the advisers from whom he took counsel have been thrust aside, and that now he goes it alone. One hears the term "highhanded" applied to his methods by his opponents, some refer to him as the "Little Napoleon."

Daladier's unusual personality is such as might perhaps lend color to charges of this sort. He smashes his way through to what he wants—a born fighter who neither gives nor asks quarter.

The premier comes of solid peasant stock. You know he is stubborn and pugnacious by the set of his jaw and the way his thick neck rises out of his meaty shoulders. He ordinarily disdains oratorical flourishes, leaving that sort of thing to softer souls. He is blunt.

He charges. He snorts. He rolls interminable cigarettes, and stews the ashes over often untidy clothes. Having seen him in action, you know what people mean when they refer to him by his nickname of "The Bull of Provence."

pleasure to call upon our party members here in Wisconsin to follow through as they did in 1932 and 1936.

Michael K. Reilly of Fond du Lac, a former congressman, said:

"If we are to progress toward industrial democracy, if our government by and for the people is to continue, if we are to restore opportunity to all, we must follow the leadership of President Roosevelt."

Federal Judge F. Ryan Duffy, invited to speak, said he had attended no political meetings since ascending the bench because he felt it was "the proper course."

Among 405 present were Albert G. Schmiedeman of Madison, former governor, and A. Matt Werner of Sheboygan, former state NRA chief and now a University of Wisconsin regent.

James Hughes of West De Pere, scheduled toastmaster, was unable to attend because of illness. His substitute was Frank J. Kuhl, managing director of the Wisconsin Jackson Day Dinner Committee.

Wallace Asks Aid of 'Former Republicans'

Des Moines, Iowa, — (AP)— Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace last night declared that "former progressive Republicans" must stay in the Democratic fold for the party to win this year.

In a speech at the Iowa Jackson day dinner here, the cabinet official, once a Republican himself, said, "To continue to be a national party, capable of winning national elections and carrying national responsibilities, it must continue to appeal to those who formerly were progressive Republicans."

"It must keep its standings with the people of the south and at the same time appeal to the farmers of the north and the west and to the workers and forward looking business men in the cities."

If the president cannot be induced to run for a third term, he added, the nominee must be deeply rooted in "the fundamental attitudes of a Jefferson, a Jackson, a Wilson and a Roosevelt."

Personnel Board Rejects Plea for New Examination

One Member of Group Dissatisfied With Oral Tests

MADISON — (AP)—The state board of personnel unanimously denied yesterday the petition of Calmer Browdy acting secretary of the public service commission, for a new examination for the secretaryship.

Browdy claimed a recent oral examination in which he failed to pass did not adequately test the ability of the applicants and was "arbitrary and discriminatory." He said written tests should have been given.

Roy Reed, Ripon, who called the controversy a "tempest in a teapot" moved rejection of the petition. Chairman Bjarne Mjelde, Stoughton, and Mrs. Lulu Nelson, Grantsburg, concurred, but Mjelde said he was dissatisfied with oral tests.

Doesn't Like Method "There is a tremendous defect in this method of examination," he said. "I feel jumpy ever time we have one. There's always criticism of the results and it seems to me there is always the smell of politics about it. Speaking for myself and the other board members, I think I can say we don't give a hoot about politics."

Reed argued the oral test was proper and complimented the examining board composed of Wyeth Allen, Milwaukee; F. E. Sensenbrenner, Neenah; and Donald Perry, Black River Falls.

Personnel Director A. J. Opstedal said the only criticism of the examination was that the "acting secretary isn't among the upper three."

Successful candidates certified to the public service commission were Paul Clark, Eau Claire, and Estelle Rowe, Madison, present commission employees, and Thomas Melham, Milwaukee. One will be named to succeed Browdy.

World Traveler to Address Students

Lecturer Will Tell Experiences at High School Wednesday

Delbert Keith Harter, 24-year old lecturer, will speak at the Appleton High School lyceum Wednesday afternoon on "The Odyssey of American Youth." Although he is in his early twenties, Harter has had a variety of experiences which he shares with his youthful audiences.

In working his way through the University of California at Los Angeles Harter sang with a dance orchestra, did commercial deep sea diving on the Frisco Bay bridge construction, piloted a plane for dusting farm crops and even tried parachute jumping. As an athlete he played football, boxed, rowed and high-jumped.

Since his graduation Harter has visited 58 foreign countries, islands and possessions. In his lecture Harter tells of his ambition to go through college and the way he accomplished it, about his offer to fly for the Spanish government, how he saw Christmas in Bethlehem contrasted with Arab-Jewish riots, watched Schuschnigg's historic meeting with Mussolini in Venice, saw the Ethiopian expeditionary forces return and the coronation in London. He traveled 2,500 miles through Russia, witnessed weird religious rites in India, visited the leper colonies and saw the bombing of Canton. Harter will bring some of his souvenirs to the high school for his talk.

Plan Another Hearing On Cosmetologist Code

MADISON — (AP)—The trades practice division of the department of agriculture will hold another hearing next month, it was announced today, before establishing a new code for the hair dressing and cosmetologist industry of the state.

At a hearing here yesterday, Stella Jelinek, Racine, and Mrs. Vivian Bergman, Green Bay, representatives of the Wisconsin Hairdressers and Cosmetologists association, declared many beauty shops might be forced out of business unless action was taken soon to stop price cutting and other unfair practices.

Mrs. Bergman said income of Wisconsin shops had been cut considerably last April. Miss Jelinek asserted customers generally favored code standards "because they were getting uniformly better materials and attention."

Wins Fight Against Removal to Wisconsin

Fort Worth, Texas, — (AP)—A fight against removal to Madison, Wis., for trial on a perjury indictment was won yesterday by William A. Tracy, Fort Worth oil man.

Federal Judge James C. Wilson denied the government's motion for a rehearing of a habeas corpus case decided in Tracy's favor last April. Tracy was indicted in June, 1936, but attorneys contended the grand jury before which the alleged perjury was committed was improperly drawn and hence not a legal body.

Severe Restrictions Placed On Information Concerning U. S. Airplane Production

BY DEVON FRANCIS

Associated Press Aviation Editor New York — (AP)—The armed forces have imposed restrictions of almost war-time severity on information regarding American warplane production in connection with the export of aircraft, the army's air rearmament drive and plans for expanding the navy's air force.

In the interests of national defense, pictures of American-made military planes must be submitted to the army, or to the navy, for approval before publication.

Announcements by manufacturers under the same scrutiny. Aircraft, engine, accessory and instrument makers decline to divulge information which, in any way, could be construed to be a violation of the 1917 espionage act.

Indirect, the ban is nonetheless effective because firms having government contracts are held responsible for the protection of certain technical information on the pain of criminal action under the espionage act, which provides a $10,000 fine and two years in prison.

In practice, the restrictions have begun to apply to all information, whether it concerns aircraft for the American armed services, or for export.

Until about two years ago, the navy, in announcing contracts, described the type of plane ordered, the number, the official designation, and even at times the units to which they would be assigned when delivered. Now only the money value of the contract and the name of the manufacturer are given.

In the fall of 1938, the army began to follow suit to the extent of withholding now the number of planes involved in an order and such information as speed.

To take photographs of export war planes, a civilian must obtain permission of the government they are being made for, and of the United States army, or the navy.

43 States Become Eligible for Aid In Wildlife Plan

158 of 187 Proposed Projects Have Been Approved by U. S.

Washington — (AP)—Chairman Robertson (D-Va.) of the house wildlife conservation committee, said today that 43 states had become eligible for assistance in the first 18 months federal aid was provided for wildlife restoration.

Robertson, co-author of the act providing such assistance, said that in these states 187 projects had been submitted and 158 approved.

Robertson praised the budget estimate of $2,500,000 for the work, a $1,000,000 increase from the current year as "a big boost" for wildlife restoration.

The act is financed from the excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition. The funds are used in cooperation with the states to acquire land, improve natural conditions, or conduct studies to benefit wildlife.

Robertson made public estimated allotments on the basis of 1938 license sales. Allotment of the funds will be based on 1939 sales, which will vary the figures slightly.

Among Robertson's estimates of allotments to participating states on the basis of fiscal 1941 budget estimates were:

Illinois $67,553; Indiana, $85,823; Iowa $43,568; Kentucky $31,413; Michigan $130,987; Minnesota $68,101; Missouri $52,328; Ohio $100,831; Wisconsin $61,349.

Beckham, Ex-Governor And Senator, Dies at His Home in Kentucky

Louisville, Ky., — (AP)—J. C. W. Beckham, former Democratic governor of Kentucky and United States senator, died at 5 a. m. (central standard time) today. He was 71.

Beckham, then lieutenant governor, became governor in 1900 after the assassination of William Goebel. The veteran politician and lawyer ill since a stroke of paralysis last August, was a leading figure in Kentucky political history nearly a half-century, beginning with his election over his own protests as a state representative when he was 24.

He was elected to the United States senate in 1914 and served one term.

In recent years he tried in vain to win again the election to both the governorship and the senate.

His most recent office was that of chairman of the state public service commission.

Beckham actively supported Gov. (now Senator) A. B. Chandler in 1938 in his unsuccessful effort to win the senatorial nomination from Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, backed by President Roosevelt. Chandler went to the senate last fall to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator M. M. Logan, also a Democrat.

Pegler Charges Elders Hold Control of Youth Movements

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—The common bond between all the youth movements which have caused such commotion since last summer is that none of them emphasize character and the obligation of the individual human being to behave decently. This will be denied with great resentment on behalf of those youth movements which are directed by the clergy, but I insist that even in those groups the purpose is not primarily to refine the individual. The purpose is to unite a lot of young people against other young people who are also being united by their elders for conflicting aims.

None of these youth movements, from the Boy Scouts on up through the grades to ham-n-eggs and Townsendism, is a spontaneous or independent action. Young men and women may hold the official positions, attend to the correspondence, arrange the conventions and make the speeches, but in the background of every youth movement in Europe and in this country you will find shrewd elders guiding and greatly enjoying the precocious antics of the little dears. Up in the ham-n-eggs and Townsend age brackets the political engineers are less modest. In the Cleveland convention of the old folks' party in 1936 old Doc Townsend was on the platform and all over the place, and the old gentleman did manage to hang onto his show, but various younger political adventurers gave him a hard wrestle just the same.

Charlie Coughlin yanked off his coat and collar and gave the old folks what-for, and a reverend carpetbagger from Louisiana, who had lost out when Huey Long was shot, busted into the convention and tried his darndest to take over. So the old doctor still holds the nominal leadership of the Townsend thing, but you may have noticed that the old people have been exploited in the most shameless manner by candidates for the senate and congress who are much below the pension age. They get elected on the Townsend vote, and then nothing happens nor will it ever. The ham-n-eggs thing was a plain racket, and all the leaders were springers by comparison with their elderly victims.

Perhaps I shouldn't have mentioned the boy scouts as a youth movement because they are too young to matter, and, anyway, so far as I know, they are not exploited. However, they aren't independent and that is one of the points I am making. Elder people run them just as elders run the antics of the 'teenies and the younger 20s.

Youth Will Continue to Get Best Advice at Home

I still think youth will continue to get the best advice and direction at home, and that if the American

Woman's Club Meets at City Hall at Chilton

Chilton — The Chilton Woman's club met at the city hall at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon with the Rev. J. M. Ayres, pastor of Trinity Presbyterian church of Chilton as speaker. "Whispering Pines" was his topic. Music during the meeting was furnished by Mrs. Adam Aldorfer of Chilton. After the meeting lunch was served by the hostesses, Mrs. William Schaefer, Mrs. Earl Meser and Mrs. Edward Landgraf.

A birthday party and library benefit has been planned for the next meeting on Jan. 22, with Mrs. Frank Anderson, Mrs. Roland Tesch, Mrs. John Goggins and Mrs. Carl Hofmeister as hostesses.

13 Cases of Measles Reported During Week

Thirteen cases of measles were reported to the city health department last week, the first this year, according to Claude N. Greisch, deputy health officer. Eleven of the cases were reported at Zion Lutheran school, one at Edison school and one pre-school child. Other contagion reported included 25 cases of chicken pox, five cases of whooping cough and one case of mumps. Active cases at the end of the week were 30 of chicken pox, 16 of measles and 27 of whooping cough, Greisch reported.

Of these new youth movements however, is there any inspiration to better conduct. They all seem very hard-boiled, power-hungry and demanding, and no vote of sacrifice or idealism is heard in the general fuss about resolutions and political stratagems.

The rascals now in their middle years or early old age who have robbed the public kity and weakened faith in popular government in the political bad lands of the country cannot claim to have had raising or no religious teaching. They got that, all right, but it didn't take. They didn't get character. I don't know why, but youth movements are not the answer. No youth is going to catch character in a politicalized, engineered youth movement. Hitler, Stalin and Mussolini have shown what youth movements do.

Roosevelt Fails To Mention Third Term at Banquet

Silence Was Urged by His New Deal Supporters, Lawrence Says

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington—What President Roosevelt left unsaid at the Jackson day dinner is more significant than what he said.

For, with the Democratic party about to face a general election and with the whole country wondering whether Mr. Roosevelt would accept a third term if his party desired to draft him, not a word about the forthcoming campaign was uttered by the chief speaker of all.

Mr. Roosevelt's explanation for such omission was not to be derived from his speech, except possibly the implication that in times like these partisan considerations might be subordinated, and personalities, too.

The president, who is a masterful speaker at political functions, must have pondered just what to do with the dilemma of a Jackson day dinner when for weeks it has been assumed he would make some important pronouncement about his own political fortunes. His third term supporters, however, became alarmed at this possibility a few weeks ago and begged him to remain silent. Their reasoning was that no body could tell between now and July what crisis might arise in connection with the European war, and, presumably, a crisis would mean tolerance by the party leaders of a third term nomination.

So, Mr. Roosevelt, who, it is believed, had made up his mind to say something, even though general, about his own retirement from office, agreed with the "left-wing" elements who urged him to remain silent. Today the dinner at the various Jackson day dinners know no more than they did the day before yesterday about Mr. Roosevelt's plans and purposes with respect to the 1940 nomination. They know only that he is a charming personality who makes a good after-dinner talk and manages to keep away from the most important topics of the day by a light-heartedness which is encouragement itself for a political party that must enter the lists on the defensive.

Reviews Record
Mr. Roosevelt naturally reviewed the record of the last seven years in glowing terms, but he said not a word about the enormous debt piled up in those seven years or how the American people are going to pay it, or what steps may be planned now to prevent the purchasing power of the dollar from being curtailed or the monetary content of the dollar from being further devalued.

The practical, long-range questions that are bothering economists, and particularly business men who want to look ahead and gauge their plans accordingly, have been ignored by the political folks here. Possibly it is because men in the political world never cross bridges till they come to them.

The president knows that the public debt will not be paid off in his own term of public service and that taxes cannot be imposed in sufficient quantity to balance the budget without wrecking the national economy. So, as long as the government exists by borrowing and the people are ready to give their savings to the government, the spenders in Washington have nothing to fear.

Money Influences
If, in other words, there is an endless stream of money available to pay for the various social reforms, to care for the persons forced into idleness by reform laws, then the beneficiaries of the various billions of dollars spent can always influence the outcome of an election by their numerical preponderance. As long as the nation is neither tax-conscious nor borrowing-conscious, the politicians can continue to have light-hearted, jovial banquets and festivities.

The president's best comment was the following:
"The future lies with those wise political leaders who realize that the great public is interested more in government than in politics, that the independent vote in this country has been steadily on the increase, at least for the past generation."

The truth is the independent voters are interested in selfless administration of government, and not in selfish politics. When a political party or its leaders show themselves unmindful of what they do either with public funds or public power, the independent voters do one of those old-fashioned jobs of house-cleaning which surprises nobody except the officeholders as an avalanche or landslide reported in the headlines on the day after the election.

Mrs. Harry Isaacson entertained at two tables of contract bridge Monday afternoon at her home on E. Madison street. The games were followed by a luncheon. High honors at each table were won by Mrs. Henry Korb and Mrs. J. E. Leyrer.

Returns From Indiana
Mrs. William Below has returned home from a visit with relatives and friends at Hartford City, Ind. She accompanied her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Below of Manitowoc, on the trip. The latter's mother, Mrs. Ida Barnes returned with them to her home at Hartford City after

Clapper Finds Evansville Too Busy for Any Defeatism

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Evansville, Ind.—They're not doing much worrying here. The principal anxiety of the moment is whether Evansville lands that new factory. If it does, then two medium-sized apartment houses will be built.

If Evansville doesn't land the new factory, well it's no blow—just a little velvet that didn't come along. The bankers have more deposits and are making more loans than in 1929. One of them said he didn't know anybody in the town who wasn't better off than he was ten years ago. There has been only one strike, and that was abortive; the employers have kept the outside unions down by fair wage policies which have kept the employers satisfied.

Thomas E. Dewey says there is defeatism in the land. These businessmen in Evansville pride themselves upon being outdone by none in their hatred of President Roosevelt. That is part of the ritual. But they are making money and planning to make more of it—and they have done it through remarkable personal enterprise which has built several new businesses here since 1929. These new businesses—refrigerators and allied products—were created by old-fashioned individual initiative and are now the backbone of the town's healthy economy. Mr. Dewey doesn't need to worry about defeatism in Evansville.

Some of these smaller American cities are worth a look. The American small town, the small city of 100,000 or less, the rural townships, are going to be important in the next election and in determining national direction. The small-town voter and the rural voter swung back to their normal Republican allegiance in the 1938 elections and the Democrats dropped out of the elective jobs as if a scythe had whacked them down.

Evansville happens to be a Democratic town and is likely to stay so, even though the state is on the dope sheets to go Republican next fall. Evansville's mayor, William Dress, may be the Democratic candidate for governor. The McNutt organization has offered it, and thus persuaded the mayor to head up the McNutt presidential campaign work in this congressional district.

Such Communities Are Backbone Of The Nation
But Evansville is of more interest economically than politically. It is this kind of community, largely native-born, small enough to be a neighborhood, which is the balance-wheel, the backbone, the stabilizer, the core, or whatever you want to call it, of American life.

Look at Evansville in October, 1929, and again in October, 1939. Ten years ago, at the peak of the boom, there were 21,256 water meters in Evansville. Ten years later there were 24,305—an increase of almost 15 per cent during the depression. Some 3,000 families began using running water.

Gas meters increased in these 10 years from 16,153 to 23,549. Electric meters increased from 27,058 to 40,315. These increases of some 40 per cent in gas and electric meters mean that for several thousand families the standard of living went up during the depression—population growth does not account for any considerable portion of the increase.

Scout Troops Will Hold Inter-Patrol First Aid Contests

Boy scout troops of the valley council this month will start inter-patrol first aid competition leading up to the council and district first aid contests later this year.

Scoutmasters have been requested by Clarence H. Engberg, executive, to notify his office by Feb. 1 about the scope of their troops' activities and to report results by Feb. 16, the deadline for completion of inter-patrol contests.

The district first aid contests will be held Feb. 26-March 2 and the valley council finals March 9. The Region 7 contest is held later in Chicago.

Warden Explains Law On Fishing Licenses

To clarify the change in the state law concerning fishing licenses, Emil Kramer, conservation warden in Outagamie county, today said that anyone using two lines must have a license. He emphasized that age makes no difference for boys under 18, using two lines or tipups must have licenses.

Everyone must have a license to fish with a rod and reel but no license is needed for cane pole fishing if only one line is used, he said. Ice fishing with one tipup is permitted without a fishing license.

35 Veterans Request Aid During December

Thirty-five applications for soldiers and sailors relief were investigated during December, according to a report of Edward E. Lutz, Outagamie county service officer. Lutz traveled 1,102 miles on duty, made 58 home calls and had 142 office callers. Twenty-four county veterans were patients at veterans' hospitals during the month, according to the report.

86 Divorces Granted In County Last Year

Eighty-six divorces were granted by Municipal Judge Thomas H. Ryan and Circuit Judge Edgar V. Werner in Outagamie county last year, according to a report by Sydney Shannon, clerk of circuit court. In 1938 a total of 84 divorces was granted and in 1937 a total of 109.

Mother, Mix Your Own Cough Remedy. It's Fine.

Quick, Comforting Relief. Saves Money. Easily Mixed.
This well-known home-mixed medicine costs very little, but it gives delightful, swift-acting relief from coughs due to colds. It takes but a moment to prepare—it's so easy a child could do it. And it saves real money.
Mix a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed.
Then get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. Thus you make a full pint of really splendid cough remedy and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, lasts a family a long time and children love its taste.
And for quick, blessed relief, you'll say it is truly wonderful. It has a remarkable action. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages.
Pinex is a compound containing Norway Pine and palatable guaiacol, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Lawrence Phi Delt Chapter Winner of Fraternity Award

House One of 35 in Nation Eligible for Cleveland Trophy

The Lawrence chapter of Phi Delta Theta has been awarded the national fraternity's Cleveland trophy, given annually to the small-college chapter which has made the most outstanding record.

The Lawrence chapter is one of 35 in colleges which have less than 800 male students. The award was for the school year 1938-39.

Donated by the Cleveland (Ohio) Alumni club, the handsome bronze statuette group was first awarded in 1928. Other winners have been chapters at Knox, Franklin, Case, Ohio Wesleyan and Allegheny.

The Lawrence chapter ranked 11th during the year 1937-38. An improved scholarship record, together with a well-rounded list of merit points in college activities, combined to give the Wisconsin Beta chapter the top rating in its division. Robert Van Nostrand, Wauwatosa, and William S. Hatten, Elm-hurst, Ill., were president during the first and second semesters respectively last year.

Kenneth Buesing of Appleton is the present president of the Lawrence chapter.

A formal presentation of the award will be made within the next month at a joint meeting of the Fox River Valley Alumni club and the active chapter of the fraternity, John H. Witterding, who is province president of the fraternity, will make the award.

YOUNG STUDENT OF ASTRONOMY

Astronomy, a study which his father teaches, already has evoked the interest of 5-year-old Harry Ward Millis, son of Dean John S. Millis of Lawrence college. With the help of his father, who is professor of astronomy, the boy is peering through the 10-inch refracting telescope in the Lawrence observatory. A gift of Philetus Sawyer of Oshkosh, the telescope was built in 1892 and the observatory named in honor of L. W. Underwood, who was acting president of the college in 1893 and 1894. The observatory, largely a gift of Appleton citizens, is open evenings, under the direction of Carl Elias, amateur Appleton astronomer. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Efforts to Bar Arms Sales To World War Belligerents Won Headlines 25 Years Ago

BY VIOLA HELLMERMANN

Prohibition of the exportation of war munitions to Europe, a subject which made newspaper headlines in 1915 as the arms embargo, was also a burning topic back in 1915, when the house foreign affairs committee in Washington had under consideration a resolution prohibiting the sending of munitions to the European belligerents.

Appleton residents read in their two daily newspapers on Jan. 4, 1915, that the two largest German-American and Irish-American societies in the United States joined before the house foreign relations committee to fight for the Vollmer-Barthold resolution, as it was called. Leaders of both groups said passage of the resolution would accomplish more for universal peace than all the pamphlets the peace proponents could put together.

Representative Vollmer of Iowa, one of the authors of the bill, urged its passage in eloquent terms. "Are we so anxious to achieve the reputation of being the arch hypocrite of the world," he asked, "that we go into the Lord's sanctuary and offer prayers for peace when we have blood money in our pockets?"

"If America stopped furnishing munitions to the belligerents, the war would end in 90 days," he contended. "These munitions are going to the aid of only one side, the allies. Our neutrality has undergone a strange change."

Conflicting Stories

News from the battlefronts of Europe during the first week of January, 1915, was, as usual, full of French contradiction of German claims, and German contradictions of French successes. Both countries declared, however, that a violent battle was raging along the entire western front in the Vosges mountains.

Some of the bulletins which came from European capitals in those days were the following:

Paris, Dec. 31.—The French have captured the village of Steinbach in upper Alsace following one of the hardest fought engagements of the war to date.

Berlin, Dec. 31.—Flat contradiction of the French claims of successes came from the war office today. It is declared the French attacks north of Chalons have been repulsed with heavy losses and that at no point have there been any gains by the allies.

Petrograd, Dec. 31.—Today's reports from the front declare the Germans are being driven back on several points on the Vistula and Roka rivers, following a series of attacks and counter attacks.

Berlin, Jan. 5.—German airmen, it is officially reported, have dropped bombs on the British ammunition bases near Dunkirk, destroying a large quantity of ammunition.

Berlin, Jan. 6.—The official reports from the western front today take direct issue with the French claims of important successes along the Meuse and in Alsace.

Lord Northcliffe, owner of the London Times and other London newspapers, declared in an interview with the United Press, "We do not underestimate the Germans. Many of us are of the opinion that this war will go several years. Nonetheless Germany is beaten and was beaten the day she retreated from Paris."

The war seemed closer to Americans when they read in their newspapers one of the last days of December 1914, that Canadian soldiers patrolling Ft. Erie fired upon boats containing American duck hunters, killing one of them. The following day it was reported that the Canadian militiamen did not shoot to kill, that they were simply trying to frighten the men and did not aim to hit them.

WHO EVER HEARD OF REDUCING A TAX?

Governor Heil's action in respect to the diversion of highway funds to general purposes is no worse than that of some of his predecessors. But the diversion has now gone so far that it must be almost accepted as a policy of state, and this is highly to be regretted.

It is to be regretted first of all because it is false taxation. It is to be regretted because it indicates that lack of principle in the affairs of state that continually finds the easiest way about irrespective of the awful results that are piling up.

What possible reason can justify a sales tax of about 40 per cent a gallon on gasoline in Wisconsin except to provide as nearly perfect a highway system for the motorist as can be built? Why should the man who drives a car go down into his pocket every day to contribute to the state school system, pensions, relief, the maintenance of insane asylums and prisons and even the support of state payrollers? And why should the man who buys gasoline for a high-powered launch escape this obligation? What is there sacred about one use of gasoline that is so unsaintly about another?

In addition to the six million dollars now diverted by Mr. Heil the Wisconsin automobile owner has already contributed, besides his general taxes, a total of 27 million dollars in highway taxes during the last decade for non-highway purposes.

Our government is so weak-kneed and spineless, and has been for long, that it cannot keep the simplest promises to the people when the friends of those in power are banging on the door for funds and want nephews, nieces, cousins and what-not placed on the public payroll.

With the gas tax we inaugurated a new system of taxation for a specific purpose. But after it had run a reasonable course we erased the purpose but not the taxes. We simply apply them to something else.

Perhaps it is no particular occasion for alarm but the people, we think, should not be insensible to this proposition; that the creation of new taxes is always attended by glorious promises which are so seldom fulfilled a man might offer a large reward for one instance where they were, without risking his money.

THE LADY AND THE TIGER

The attorney for the Home Owners Loan Corporation at Chicago has secured the arrest of Mrs. Augusta Carmichael for destroying government property, to wit, the home of Mrs. Carmichael which the government had taken over under foreclosure proceedings.

Since the government says that the case of Mrs. Carmichael is not an exception but almost a rule, reporting "between 60 and 70" other such instances of wrecked homes by evicted owners at Chicago, it must be set down as something with which the authorities must reckon.

Mrs. Carmichael borrowed a little less than $3,000 from HOLC with the obligation of making repayment at $22.50 a month. In five years she had only returned $249, so the government started action. And Mrs. Carmichael started action too.

The government's action was to get rid of Mrs. Carmichael. And Mrs. Carmichael's action was to demolish the property. When the government took over the house it found the woodwork daubed with green paint, the walls daubed with oil, the plumbing wrecked, the kitchen sink and other fixtures removed and the first floor of the house flooded with water to such an extent that when the front door was opened a small torrent flooded the marsh.

It is a fair question to ask why so many hundreds of borrowers from HOLC the country over turn with venom upon the government when it seeks a return of its loan. Putting together the little details from many stories into something like a mosaic we find a design that persists throughout. There has been such a flood of talk about the government owing everybody a living, owing everybody a job, owing everybody a home and owing everybody about everything that a great many people have taken to heart these promises without discounting them at all for the political suds at the top and have become very bitter when they have been thrown out because they were unable to meet payments. Let the administration take a warning from the growing number of people in this country who look upon a promise as something to be performed.

A UNITED STATES OF EUROPE

Since the war began England, France and Germany have all been toying with the idea of a federation of European states as a bulwark against war.

But before the bloodshed started their statesmen derided any such idea.

The popularity of the subject now may be only an indication of the ease with which the multitude is mollified. For certainly when Daladier and Hitler both now publicly discuss the same proposal it is no sign that Utopia is on the way but rather that a bone of contention is being fought over. Fifteen years ago when Briand, the great French leader, was forwarding this very idea his countrymen were tapping their foreheads; and when the German chancellor of the day spoke sympathetically for the plan Herr Hitler settled into a gloom that nearly took him to the river.

A United States of Europe is impossible, and anyway wholly unnecessary. It is as tricky as Socialism, promising everything and blinding the sight to reality.

But perhaps identical results can be secured by a more practical approach to the subject. For the purpose of all these proposals is to prevent war. And war, we believe, can be as completely prevented by a certain democratic process that is invariably destroyed as a prelude to every war.

If the power nations of Europe could be prevented from hurling their armies and munitions at other nations over grievances, false or imaginary, without the passage first of a declaration of war by a legislative body chosen by the people, would we not have accomplished all the desirable results of a federation of states without creating the pitfalls and inflammations a closer association would be found to create?

There probably wouldn't be any war in Europe today were not the people in certain nations tied hand and foot and gagged. If freedom of thought and expression still existed, if the people through their honestly chosen representatives still ruled, they would be discussing the wine crops in France today and planning another music festival at Salzburg in Germany.

There is an indispensable requisite for peace. The world must compel freedom of speech and people's action in every nation. But before that is possible there must be an adjustment of ancient differences in something approaching a just and practical manner. There can be no thought of obtaining exact justice because no one can discover the facts upon which to base it. Too many races have fought back and forth over Europe to permit us now to determine exact boundaries.

And then there are the colonies, and the necessity of the Haves making concessions to the Havenots so that opportunity, which is so important to mankind, may be somewhat fairly provided to all.

It is a tremendous problem but its magnitude appears frightening only because it has been attacked always by the fearful rules of the Past. And they have signally failed, and always will fail.

ENGLAND REMAINS SOMEWHAT FREE

Just what news value is there to the story of the return to England of a nobleman's daughter from her residence in Germany where she occupied a dazzling point of interest in the Fuehrer's eyes?

That is the proposition that is rocking the English press more violently than German bombs did Scapa Flow.

The conservative newspapers gave her return a few terse paragraphs on the inside page, while those journals called sensational by the opposition—as if there were anything sensational in England—gave front page display of the first water.

It is an instance, we believe, where the conservative press tripped over its own feet. Certainly no news item except a general attack on the British coast could have carried the interest to the English people of this story even though they hated the Fuehrer and were willing to throw eggs at the nobleman's daughter as a little snob gone haywire.

A people in war time, too, need relaxation. The tension grows among them so that they are practically on edge all the time.

The employment, therefore, of other emotions than those aroused by war might have been as valuable as a week-end rest at a seaside resort. And certainly, in that sense, Hitler's blond favorite of English blood provided many vacations.

DALE HARRISON'S In Old New York

New York—City Scenes:
1. It wasn't so long ago that a Broadway theatre marquee blazed the name of Helen Gahagan in "Tonight or Never."
When the play finished its run, Miss Gahagan went to Hollywood to appear in a picture; but before she departed she paused long enough to become the wife of a struggling young actor. In Hollywood the young man was often referred to as "Mr. Gahagan."
One day he got a bit part in a picture. Then came other bit parts, and better parts. Soon he was in demand for leads. He played opposite the great Garbo. No longer was he "Mr. Gahagan." Today it is Miss Gahagan who is known as—Mrs. Melvyn Douglas.

2. He was one of the wealthiest men in town. His hobby, when he wasn't earning money, was astronomy. Because he could afford it, he had a costly telescope built. They said that for its size it was one of the finest in the world.
One morning he awoke to find his fortune gone. Such sometimes is the way of wealth. Left to him was little more than his telescope and his love of the stars. That is why he often may be found these evenings along 42nd Street near Sixth Avenue, his telescope pitched on the curb and aimed at the moon or a planet; and you and I may look through that telescope and by the magic of its lenses be out of this world—for ten cents; and if sometimes there are none of us to pay the fee, the man himself looks through his telescope and sees in it such vastness as to make him smile that men ever should worry over losing such a thing as a mere fortune.

3. One of the events of the mad "Hellzapoppin'" show is a number called "The Bumpus Daisy," a dance completely bereft of dignity, for lack of a sterner way of phrasing it. The chorus girls come down the aisles and urge gentlemen in the audience to dance with them.
The girls don't like it. No girl likes to importune a man to dance with her. The Messrs. Olsen and Johnson, however, insist upon it. Disturbing an audience is one of the ingredients of the Olsen-Johnson formula of humor.

The other night Dr. Dafoe, physician to Ontario's famous Dionne quintuplets, was in the audience. One of the girls was given his seat number and instructed to "get him up, and make him dance." The young lady, like the rest of us, has to eat, and this was part of her job. Not that she wasn't thrilled at the prospect of bumpus daisying with one of the world's most famous men of medicine. Rather, she knew how embarrassing it would be for him. Dr. Dafoe is a quiet, retiring gentleman.
With the other girls, and to the rhythm of the music, she pranced down the aisle. Dr. Dafoe wasn't in the seat where they had said he would be. Forewarned, perhaps, he had switched seats. But they found him, and over his protests he was literally dragged into the aisle; and he was put through his bumpus daisies under the cruel glare of a powerful spotlight, while from the stage they gleefully pointed him out, so that all might stare at an embarrassed little man who, I'll bet a pretty penny, would have given a lot at that moment to have been back in his cozy study at Callander, Ontario, away from what two slapstick comedians considered "entertainment."

4. The man was in love. As soon as he got a break in the gag-writing business (he told himself) he would get married. He got the break. He was so anxious to make good, now that opportunity was at hand, that he offered a partnership in his job to a friend.

The "friend" met the man's fiancée, fell in love with her herself, divorced his own wife, and married her.
Epilogue: Today the man who was jilted is still single, and one of the most successful men in his field. His "pal" who stole his intended bride is barely earning a living as a ticket speculator.

5. They were having one of those regular show-folk discussions in Lindy's the other 4 a.m., the subject being "what is a nice girl?" Teddy Powell, composer-band-leader, silenced them with his definition:
"A nice girl," said Teddy, "is a girl who walks in her sleep when she dreams about automobile rides!"

Looking Backward

10 YEARS AGO
Tuesday, Jan. 7, 1930
Officers for the coming year were elected at that annual meeting of Theda Clark alumnae association Monday night at the home of Mrs. M. N. Fitz, Neenah. Miss Marie Kline was to be the new president; Miss Lillian Lyon was named vice president; and Miss Luella Campshure was chosen secretary of the group. The treasurer was to be Miss Verna Moreau and the new directors were Miss Lucille Lenz, Miss Angeline Steiner, Miss Hilga Thiel and Miss Ed Rhoades.
Work had been started in the 3-car garage to be erected at the north side of the county jail. The work was being done by the Hoffman Construction company of Appleton at a cost of about $1,600.

25 YEARS AGO

Tuesday, Jan. 12, 1915
At the annual meeting of the Appleton Cemetery association the previous day officers were reelected as follows: President, Herman Erb; vice president, Humphrey Pierce, secretary-treasurer, Joseph Koffend, Jr.
Local bakers were considering cutting the sizes of bread loaves and restaurants had restored 25-cent business men's luncheons, having made a 10-cent increase to 35 cents a short time previous.

The amount of tax received by the city treasurer up to the previous night was $59,000, while at the same time a year ago the collection amounted to $63,000.

Turkey had replied to the Italian ultimatum, but the answer was considered unsatisfactory. An investigation of the Hodeida incident was pressed and further negotiations were expected. The German cruiser Bremen arrived at Wilhelm's Haven badly damaged by a mine.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell
AUNT NELL
When there are troubled hours to bear,
It strengthens me to tell
One who has not been strange to Care—
Aunt Nell.
She never speaks of sorrow boine,
Or says one word to show
That she has wept, her spirit torn
With woe.
She has no selfishness to cloud
The welcome in her eyes,
But all her goodness makes her proud
And wise.
She has such ministering hands,
She does such kindly deeds,
She always seems to understand
Our needs.
So when I have a heart to mend
I know who'll make it well—
That valiant and unchanging friend,
Aunt Nell.

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER
Washington—A former counsellor of the German Embassy in Washington, now seemingly in poor standing with the Nazi regime, can give you a few fresh slants on the European war.
In a three-column letter to the New York Times, the former counsellor, Ernest Wilhelm Meyer, cautions against thinking that Germany will collapse easily, and suggests that the Allies may have to revise their propaganda if they expect to undermine Hitler.
Of the need of raw materials and the effectiveness of the blockade, he says:
"Only major land battles result in a very large consumption of copper, cotton, rubber, etc., and if, under the protection of his West-wall, Hitler refrains from major land battles, his need for raw materials will be greatly limited."
Of the oft-expressed view that Goering is a conservative with whom the allies could negotiate a peace if Hitler were removed, Meyer says:
"To regard Goering as a conservative is tantamount to calling Gandhi a warmonger or Trotsky a capitalist."
Of the Russian alliance, he says:
"The final attitude of Russia is undetermined; the chances of ever closer cooperation with Hitler's bolshevized Germany are many times greater than the opposite chances."

Propaganda Effective.
Hitler's constant propaganda that Germany wants not one inch of French or English soil is bound to have effect, says Meyer, especially when British naval losses begin to increase, as they may do with a sustained air attack. After all, he says, no one knows yet just how hard the fleet may suffer from the German air attack.

However, Meyer voices a view held widely here that a victory for Hitler "would be both a defeat for Germany and a defeat for Europe."
"It would be a defeat for Germany, for a transitory increase of military and political power could out-balance the definite destruction of all the better qualities of the German nation as a result of the National Socialist destruction of law and justice; of political freedom and hypocrisy; of freedom of science, education, art and press; of free labor and free enterprise, of free worship, and of all Christian, ethical principles."

Germans Not Hated
So far Meyer has found no bitterness against the German masses, either here or abroad, but wonders whether the bombing of the big cities, so often predicted, would not generate a spirit for another punishing Versailles. That, he said, would besmirch Germany a desperate fear of an Allied victory.

No help can come from telling the German masses that the war is conducted not against Germany but only against Hitler. Although this might be entirely true, nevertheless they are tragically reminded of 1914-1918, when they were told that the war was conducted only against the Kaiser. Yet after the Kaiser, they got Versailles and Germany was dismembered.

It is true, he said, that opposition to Hitler is developing within Germany into a solid front, but the masses, including the conscript army, will not turn against him without a solid conviction that his presence is Germany's worst liability.
"Nothing would better clarify the situation and promote peace by defeating Hitler," he said, "than the proclamation of about the following principles: (a) No change of frontiers except on the basis of self-determination for all, for Poles and Czechs, for Germans and Austro-Germans; (b) establishment of international law, enforced for the first time in human history, because of establishment of international police force, larger than all private armies; (c) consolidation of some major colonies into an international pool; (d) establishment of a European union—of the United States of Europe."

Just a Step Behind the News
By Dave Boone
Democrats all over the country have just paid from $25 to $100 a plate for a dinner, and if they took home some of the hotel silver, you couldn't blame 'em. At that price, I guess they all know what undernourishment really means.

The dinner was given in honor of General Jackson, but "in honor" would have smacked down any waiter who brought him a check for $100 for food that would fill anything less than two army wagons.

The Democrats ain't out with a de luxe dinner program to save America. They're just raising money to pay off the party debt and collect some dough for the next campaign. It was funny to watch some of the boys who paid $100 a plate try to eat the party into permanent power.

Say, if the Republicans were caught eating at $100 a plate in times like these, there would be a senate inquiry before they finished their second cup of coffee.
A few Republicans showed up at some of the Jackson day dinners, here and there. I understand they just wanted to see how it felt to eat extravagantly.

President Roosevelt made a fine speech. Maybe some Democrats didn't think it was worth the money, but they must remember that, in a sense, it was a permanent investment.

The discovery of Newfoundland is generally credited to the Italian, Giovanni Caboto, who became known as John Cabot. He found it in 1497.

Under the Capitol Dome

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison — The state department of research, announced, Director August Frey, is going to hold hearings in an investigation of the state conservation department.

Thus for the second time in a few months, Governor Heil will be in the position of sponsoring investigations of departments headed by men whom he put in their jobs, however unwillingly.

Recently Frey's division concluded an exhaustive investigation of the state highway commission, an inquiry which according to Frey produced evidence reflecting upon the business judgment and competence of members of that commission. Ironically, the commission is headed by William E. O'Brien, who was reappointed by Governor Julius P. Heil several months ago.

CORCORAN TOO

Similarly indebted to the Republican administration for his present position is another prominent Democrat, James Corcoran, former state Democratic chairman, who is the chairman of the state conservation commission. Any evidence of improper activity which Frey uncovers in that department, and administration sources insist that the investigation will be productive, will be by indirection a criticism of the commission head.

It ought to be pointed out, however, that both Democrats owed their jobs not to the fact that Julius Heil admired them or owed them anything, but because of the exigencies of Coalition politics in the last session of the legislature. Both appointments were frankly made to pacify temperamental senate Democrats, and there are plenty of opinions in statehouse halls now that the governor has regretted the lack of a Republican majority which forced such favors from him.

MANY FIGHTS

Of all the departments in the state government, the conservation department is peculiarly productive of bitter, rankling controversies, hatreds and recurring public fights. The last was during the legislative session, when an assembly committee set up to investigate certain allegations against the department and its personnel allowed testimony and witnesses of such character as to impugn the whole investigation and render impotent whatever effect the committee's final recommendations might otherwise have had.

Moreover, Mr. Frey will find, if he digs very far, that of all the state capital departments, there is a greater amount of intramural intrigue in the conservation department than in any other. Those who are acquainted with the circumstances might well wonder that the department operates as efficiently as it does.

DELICATE SUBJECT

Most persons in the past have acted with forbearance toward the conservation department, even upon such occasions that its policies appeared controversial, because of the increasingly technical complexion of the subject now covered by the word "conservation." The planting, propagation and rearing of fish is something which the ordinary person knows little about. He knows even less about breeding and stocking other game.

Yet another good reason why there has been an invisible line between that department and others in the tax-supported state government is because conservation activities, like highway activities, are fiscally independent. The department operates with re-

Personal Health Talks

CALL SIGNOR GALVANI
Stainless alloys of cobalt, chromium, iron or steel, recently introduced for bridgework (these alloys have various trade names) have attained wide popularity because they are inexpensive compared with gold and porcelain and they do not take on stains in the mouth. But in some instances these stainless metals react with gold fillings, crowns, inlays already present to set up a galvanic current which causes the sore patches.

Many correspondents have written me in this vein concerning galvanic sore mouth:
Dear Sir:
Your article about galvanic sore mouth indicates that you do not understand galvanic action. . . . It is absolutely necessary that the two dissimilar metals be in contact in the mouth in order to set up galvanic action. There is no possibility of any current or any galvanic effect at all from gold and some inferior metal if the dissimilar metals are not so placed that they actually contact each other. . . . (W. B. C.)

But that assumption fails to stand when the question is put to actual test, as in the following experiment:
Dear Doctor:
The following experiment demonstrates conclusively that electric currents can be produced by the presence in the mouth of the noble metals such as gold, platinum, silver (negative) and inferior metals such as zinc, iron, tin, chromium (positive). Take any two dissimilar metals, say a silver dollar and an ordinary iron wire nail, place them in a pool of saliva (together not touching). Connect the terminals of an ordinary O. I. milliammeter, such as that commonly used in radio work, to the two pieces of metal, and a substantial current will register, often as much as 700 or 800 microamperes, which is certainly enough to produce electrolysis. (R. K. W.)

The foremost authorities on the subject of galvanic sore mouth are Everett S. Lain, M.D., and G. Sherrill Caughron, D.D.S., Oklahoma City. They have found that the heat generated by such galvanic current in the mouth is sufficient to destroy tissue or produce a burn, and that tooth enamel has the highest resistance to this current flow (18,900 ohms), the mucous membrane lining the cheek next highest (2,300 ohms), the tongue the least resistance of all (960 ohms).
Probably many individuals suffer no unpleasant effect from such galvanic current in the mouth from dissimilar metals, thanks to the alkalinity or weak acidity of their saliva.

Drs. Lain and Caughron suggest that before a diagnosis of electro-galvanic injury is made, and removal or replacement of the inferior metal undertaken, the physician should try to eliminate the possibility of certain fungus or Vincent's infections, or herpes, or syphilis, or smoker's patches.

GUNNING FOR BEAR

Zurich, Switzerland.—Members of the crack Swiss rifle team which won the International Rifle Meet at Helsinki, Finland, in 1937, were called to the Zurich zoo recently to shoot their own trophy. The prize they brought back in 1937 was a Finnish brown bear cub. They presented it to the zoo where it shared quarters with three Swiss brown bears and a polar bear.
Recently the Finn grew combative and mauled his Swiss and Arctic companions so ferociously that zoo officials called in the rifle team to execute it. The culprit has been stuffed and sent to the National Rifle Museum in Berne to be exhibited with other Swiss shooting trophies.

Farewell Events Are Held in Honor Of Dr. Mrs. Hanna

Congregational Pastor and Wife Will be Feted at Dinner Tonight

Dr. and Mrs. John B. Hanna, who leave next Monday for their new home in East Orange, N. J., are the center of interest in church activities at First Congregational church this week, for they will be honored at several meetings and informal gatherings during the last few days of their residence in Appleton. Tonight they will be guests of honor at a dinner meeting of C. Y. W. at the Candle Glow tea room, and Friday night they will be honored by the Mr. and Mrs. club at a meeting at the church. The annual congregational meeting for the election of officers and annual reports will be held Thursday evening at the Congregational church.

The following passage was taken from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The everlasting I Am is not bounded nor compressed within the narrow limits of physical humanity; nor can He be understood through material concepts. A finite and material sense of God leads to formalism and narrowness; Allness is the measure of the infinite, and nothing less can express God."

The claims should be filed during regular office hours, 8 to 5 o'clock daily and 8 to 12 o'clock on Saturdays. Claims also may be filed with the Wisconsin State Employment Service field representative at his scheduled stops.

To accommodate persons who are employed during the day and are unable to call at the office during regular hours, the Appleton office of the employment service in city hall will be open from 7 to 8 o'clock Thursday evenings to receive claims, Gehrke said. No other business will be transacted during this period. Gehrke said, persons wishing to file claims should use the Appleton street entrance of city hall.

Before Jan. 2 this year, benefit claims were filed directly with the state industrial commission by employers.

Timing Vital In Covering High Honor

BY ELY CULBERTSON

The question of when, and when not, to cover an honor is, to most players, one of the most perplexing in contract. They fail to realize that there is more than mere promotion involved; there also is the vital factor of timing. This is perfectly illustrated in the hand discussed today:

West, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH		EAST
♠ 10 8 7 5 4 3		♠ A 9 2
♥ 8 7 2		♥ Q J 9
♦ 6 5 3		♦ K J 10 8
♣ 6		♣ Q J 10 8
SOUTH		WEST
♠ Q J		♠ A 9 2
♥ K 10 5 4 3		♥ Q J 9
♦ A 4		♦ K J 10 8
♣ K 9 7 2		♣ Q J 10 8

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 diamond	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass
2 no trump	Pass	3 no trump	Pass

North decided that the chance of taking many spade tricks was exceedingly small, since he had no possible card of entry. So he wasted no time on a lost cause. Instead, he made the shrewd lead of the eight of hearts, hoping to strike a heart suit in South's hand. Dummy played the jack to the first trick and South had to consider the situation. It was perfectly obvious, from West's bidding and the wealth of honor cards exposed in the dummy, that North must be either completely or very nearly devoid of entry cards or stoppers. He, South, however, had both diamonds and clubs stopped, and there was a good chance that he would twice gain the lead. The Rule of Eleven proved that North's heart opening had been "phony," since five higher cards were in sight. If South were to cover the heart jack, on gaining the lead in clubs or spades, he would have to lead up to dummy's remaining Q-9, but if he ducked, and declarer had only one guard to his ace, the second heart lead would establish South's suit. On this correct analysis, South played low to the first heart lead.

His judgment was well rewarded. Declarer first knocked out the diamond ace but the heart return drove out his now unguarded ace. Later declarer took the club finesse, which gave South the lead for his three good heart tricks.

West could have made his contract had he dreamed that South had only two spades. The method of play would have been to cash his diamonds after he had established them, take the ace and king of spades, and then throw South in the lead by playing dummy's last heart. After running his hearts South would have been forced to lead a club, giving West two club tricks and the contract. This line of play would have been double dummyish.

Good Taste Today

HUSBAND COMPLAINS

Dear Mrs. Post: My wife wants to have wild duck carved in the kitchen and I think she's wrong. I think it should be carved at the table. I used to do all the carving in this house, and I'm really pretty good at it, but I didn't mind losing the job when we got a maid who could do it in the kitchen. But I draw the line on wild duck and would go so far as to say that even in very stylish houses it is considered correct to carve on the dining table.

Answer: You win! In no matter how formal a house it is entirely proper that the host carve the ducks—particularly if he shot them.

Sisters Give a Party Together
Dear Mrs. Post: Are three sisters—ages 14, 16 and 17—too young to send out formal invitations to a dance, which they want to give together? Will you please tell me how to word these invitations and whether their young friends should be addressed as Mr. or Master, and Miss, or just the name without any title.

Answer: When a boy is about fifteen he is called Mister. A little girl is of course always Miss from the time she is born until she marries. If you really mean formal invitations, then I suggest the following:

Miss Margaret Blank
Miss Susanne Blank
Miss Gwendolyn Blank

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

"I always look first at a person's hands," states Lilly Pons, the petite star of screen and opera, "and then at their eyes. Hands can be so expressive that they are often an excellent indicator of a man or woman's character."

With that quotation as a lead, you can guess that today I am pleading for better care of hands. You do not have to be a lady of leisure to have hands of which you may be justly proud—in fact active, creative, working hands are by far the most interesting to look at and they can be, if properly cared for, the most beautiful. A weekly manicure at home or in a salon, daily pushing back of the cuticle with an orange stick and a cleaning by brushing, and the pretty constant use of a hand cream or lotion if you live where the temperature is cold, are the fundamental rules for hand care.

Of course there are other rules which encourage hand beauty. Have you ever tried the miraculous treatment of anointing your hands with hot olive oil and then sliding into heated cotton gloves? Keep them on while you read this month's installment of your favorite magazine serial and then be bold the wonders! If you can stand them, sleep with gloves on over the oil—those which tie snugly at the wrists with ribbon.

Miss Lilly Pons would urge you to exercise your fingers to keep them supple. She gives hers a daily work-out to keep the knuckles from enlarging and to make her hand graceful in its actions. Here is her routine:

Play the scale of a piano "on air" or place the tips of your fingers on a table, holding wrists high and arching knuckles. Then lift each finger separately, as high as you can, and curved as though you were about to pounce on an ivory key—then let it drop. Repeat this with both hands, several times, being certain to keep your wrists off the table and your knuckles arched.

To strengthen wrists and to whip up sluggish circulation (which causes hands to be an unattractive red) hold both hands out in front of you and shake them loosely and vigorously from the wrists. Try to shake them right off! Let fingers snap at each other as you shake. This should be done once a day. Another good finger exercise is this: Hold your hands, palms outward, close to your shoulders—as you do in a gesture of surprise. Then thrust your hands outward, spreading your fingers as you do, and moving only your forearm. Your upper arms are held close to your sides.

For Stains and Bleaching
Powdered pumice mixed into a paste and applied to stains by an orange stick is an effective means of banishing them, if you do it after your hands have soaked in soap and water for three or four minutes. Occasionally rub a bit of lemon juice into your hands and for a quick bleaching, use a cream hand mask which softens and whitens in a jiffy.

Never use scissors or other steel aids while manicuring, excepting tippers which are used to snip off annoying hangnails. Keep your nails oval in shape and nicely tinted with polish. Let any party find your hands well groomed and revealing the character of a meticulous beauty!

Send for my nail polish color chart which tells you which shades are most becoming to your skin tone. Write me in care of the Post-Crescent and enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

Girls Must Realize Danger of Being Too Familiar With Boys

BY ANGELO PATRI

Not long ago I wrote about girls and boys associating freely with one another, going to all-night parties, unchaperoned. I protested about it because, in my opinion, the girls were in great danger of making mistakes that would cost them dearly, not only for the day, but for a lifetime. The boy is in danger of getting himself into an unpleasant situation, time for him is unpleasantness is for the girl, tragedy, I would keep my hand between the young girl in her teens and the devastating effects of the facts of life accepted at face value. Nature has no scruples.

Many of the girls wrote to me, some agreeing, many not. The girl who wrote this paragraph is typical. "My mother says that I have been boy crazy since I was born, which is unkind and untrue. You and she are mistaken. I played with boys because there were no girls in our neighborhood that I liked. Boys are more loyal friends than girls, and better sports. I have many boy pals, and my mother seems to think that I am in love with them. These boys know better than to mention anything filthy to me. They respect me. The world moves. Why can't we move with it? Our mothers will not always be with us." And so on for many more paragraphs.

book, the first line reads: "The Misses Mary and Sara Blank," but in your case, where there are three sisters whose names are not short at that, to put them all on one line would look topsy-turvy. You might omit the Miss if you choose less formal wording. Such as this, which also appears in my book:

Mary, Sara and Gwendolyn Blank hope you will come to their dance on Saturday evening, March fourth at eight o'clock at 719 Meadowbrook Avenue

How Certain Wedding Hours Became Customary

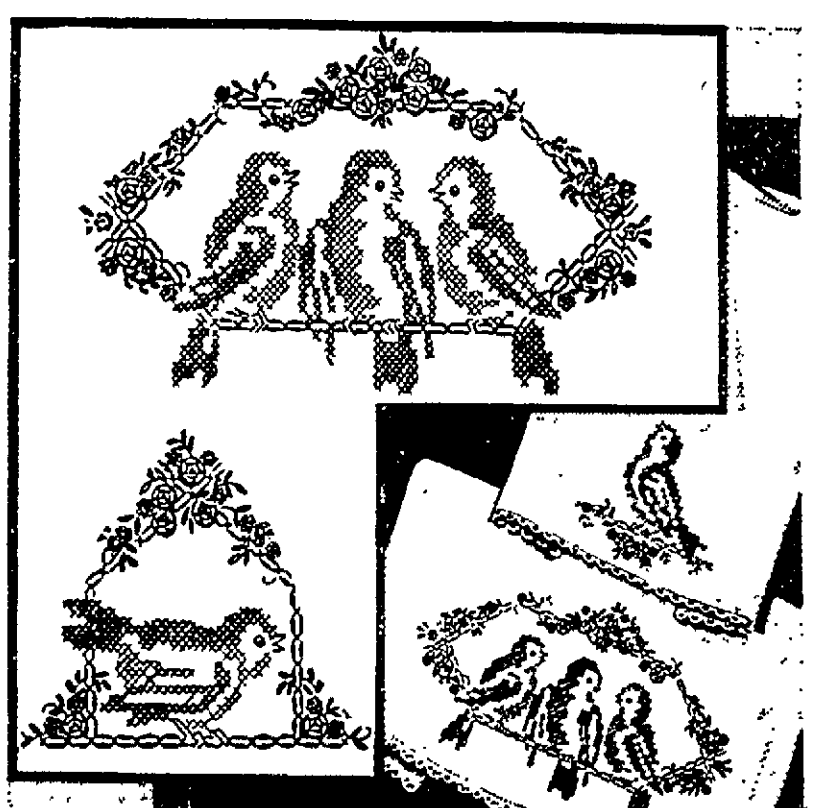

Dear Mrs. Post: Why is it that the largest and most fashionable weddings always seem to take place at noon, at four in the afternoon, and at eight o'clock in the evening?

Answer: I don't know why except that the times more than likely developed through being found most practical. At a noon wedding, breakfast is at 12:30 and men who leave their offices to go to lunch might be able to get to the wedding. Or perhaps they can take a half day off. A reception at five also means men can get there after business. Moreover, the late afternoon reception does not interfere with any one's engagements for dinner and the evening. In the South, the reason for an evening wedding is obviously to escape the heat of the day.

Working Daughter Needs as Much Rest as Working Son

BY DOROTHY DIX

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am secretary to an executive of a large concern and my work is so heavy that when I get home at night I am exhausted and my nerves are all on edge. Yet my family persist in thinking that I have passed a pleasant day amusing myself and they can't see why I am tired, "after sitting down all day." They won't understand that I am running on all six cylinders, working under a terrific strain trying to get routine dictation out of the way and being interrupted a hundred times answering the telephone, digging letters and documents out of old files, acting as a buffer between my boss and some irate customers or salesmen, and that I am up and down at my desk more times than I can enumerate. Then, when I get home, worn out at night, they jump on me and tell me that there is no reason why I should be tired. My mother expects me to help get the supper and wash the dishes, and do chores around the house afterward until I am so weary I am ready to drop. I wouldn't mind the hard work so much if even one member of my family understood and sympathized a little with what I go through.

A WORKING GIRL.

Dorothy Dix

Answer:

We hear a lot about the Tired Business Man. Much is done for his diversion after his hard day's work is over, for it is realized that he needs rest and relaxation. At home he is petted and coddled and given the easiest chair and the softest couch and exempted from all household chores.

But we hear very little of the Tired Business Girl. Probably because she is so worn out that she hasn't the strength left to raise her voice in protest against the way she is treated by her family. She is the Forgotten Woman. The hardships of whose lot no one understands, whose burden no one tries to lighten. Not for her are the prestige and privileges enjoyed in the home by her brothers.

Of course, there are exceptions to every rule, and there are some mothers who realize that it is hard for a young girl to have no play-time of life but to have to go from the schoolroom to the workroom. Also, there are mothers who appreciate that the 17-and-18-year-old shoulders sag under the burden of having to support not only themselves but also the family, and who try to save their girls from home-work. And there are mothers who are just enough to know that the laborer is worthy of his hire and who do not take Mamie's and Sally's pay envelopes from them and dole them out a few pennies out of the dollars they have earned.

But these mothers are rare. The average mother does not treat her working daughter as she does her working son. She never dreams, for one thing, of confiscating John's wages. She takes what he gives her and thinks he is so noble to help the family. And when he comes home at night, tired from his day's work, she doesn't expect him to turn in and help with the housework. But the minute poor, worn-out Mamie puts her foot in the door, Mother bids her hurry and change her dress and get the supper, mop up the bathroom, and be quick about it, for she wants her to help her make over her old dress after she has washed the dishes.

Perhaps the myriads of mothers who make their daughters the family goats do it without realizing how cruel they are being. They can't put themselves in Mamie's place and understand how office work wears a girl to the bone and frets her nerves to fiddle strings, because they have had no experience along that line. To them going down town is always a party, full of excitement and thrills. So when they think of her as going out to start forth in the morning to spend the day at a mahogany desk, they think of her as going out for a good time, and they can't see what in the world there is about it to make her tired.

If Mother could only change places with Mamie one day and know what it is to always work on a strain trying to be in top form; to bite back the tears when she is unjustly criticized by the boss; to be harried by contradictory orders; to be torn to pieces by people coming and going; to have to smile and look pleasant no matter how one's head ached or how she is inwardly seething with rage, then she wouldn't expect Mamie to do a day's housework after she had done a day's in the office treadmill.

Strait and Narrow Path Is Best
Dear Miss Dix—There are two childless couples, each of whom have been married for about eighteen years. Neither marriage has been successful so far as filling the inner needs are concerned, although each bears the outward semblance of harmony. The couples have been friends for many years. Now Mr. A. and Mrs. B. have developed a very deep love for each other. Each has struggled against this, but hopelessly, and a decision must be reached as to the courageous and the right course to pursue.

For three years this situation has existed and no solution seems in sight, unless a continuance of this endurance test can be called a solution. While Mr. A. and Mrs. B. are confident life would have a much fuller meaning for them if they were free to live it together, they doubt the possibility of finding happiness when it means trampling on the souls of two other people and disrupting two homes. Neither Mrs. A. nor Mr. B. know what has happened. Each of them is apparently satisfied to go on with a fairly happy marriage and would be shocked and torn at the thought of divorce. Mrs. A. would probably fight it to the last ditch. Are you wise enough to see through this muddle? Can you offer a philosophy that would be sustaining in one course or the other?

Answer:

It would take a wisdom far deeper than any I possess to solve your problem because it raises the insoluble question of whether we have a right to take our own happiness at the expense of others, or whether, as the Good Book says, "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it."

Nor have I any comfort to offer you beyond the suggestion that has already occurred to you—that people as fine as you and Mr. A. are, in a way, the victims of your own nobility of soul. You cannot do the things that people of lesser character do, apparently with impunity and without regret. You cannot build your house of happiness on the wrecks of two other homes.

And so I see no way out for you that you can take, but I do believe with all my soul that if we walk the strait and narrow path and keep faith with our ideals that the strength to bear whatever comes to us, as peace that passes all understanding.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE HOME

Mattie Schneider's Tested Recipes

NEW FRUIT BREADS

A loaf of fancy bread may be just the thing that is needed to round out the day's menu in a delightful way. Frequently they are as well liked as cake. They are easier to make than cake and are more likely to prove nutritious and digestible. Fancy breads find great favor with the children in the school lunch box, and for sandwiches for party refreshments they are excellent. Quick loaf breads for breakfast furnish a wholesome sweet. These fruit breads are fine to have on hand for expected or unexpected guests. They are really better made a day or so in advance, because they seem more flavorful and cut more easily on the second day.

this threat to their future health and happiness.
Many of the girls say, "If we do not get we are soon pointed out as 'dead ones' and left to ourselves. No girl likes to be unpopular." News, sense, more, more. If there is one girl that young men respect and will cultivate, it is the healthy, intelligent, self-reliant one who says "hands off." She is the type of girl they marry if they can.
And one more hint to these troubled girls. Boys are more loyal to each other than they are to the girls they play with. I know because I hear them talking about all this. Please girls, use your heads instead of your smiles, and see what happens.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

If you were advertising before the general public, which of the following book titles would sell the greater number of volumes: "The Truth About Mussolini" or "Facts About Fascism." Over 90 per cent of professional advertising men must find this test because they still don't comprehend the basic psychological law of human motivation contained in this pair of titles. The actual sales volumes are listed at the bottom of today's column.

CASE P-150: Cedric P., age 38, has been advertising manager of a national magazine.

"But I've decided to cut loose and open my own advertising agency," he told me recently.

"It seems to me that advertising has not advanced much in the last 20 years, except in its technical phases. We now can employ color even in newspaper ads, but the same old methods and appeals are still used.

"Surely there must be some new trend or innovation of ideas which could be advanced. Dr. Crane, if you were opening an agency, what would you stress?"

DIAGNOSIS:
Since advertising is not only one of my major interests, but one of the subjects which I have taught for many years, I don't want you to think I speak as a novice on this subject.

In today's limited space I shall make two vital criticisms of current advertising. First, too much of it demonstrates what I term the "Little Jack Horner Complex."

Manufacturers still pat themselves on the back excessively in their advertising copy, failing to realize that the public has little interest in or admiration for any manufacturer. It's his product which interests them, as the book title test above will show.

He may inflate his chest and strut proudly to see his name reiterated in his ad, but the public is not equally enamored of his Narcissus reaction. You readers will recall Narcissus as the youth in Greek mythology who fell in love with his own reflection.

The Creeping Man

by Frances Shelley Wees

Chapter 48

The Shining Knife
HE man came back through the doorway and went back to the little stove.

Tuck was bathed in cold, icy perspiration. Her heart was pounding in suffocating beats. She could hear it distinctly. He lifted his head and stared at her. Could he hear it too?

Bump . . . bump . . . bump.
His face was black with wrath. He looked up at the ceiling. He came over to her swiftly and glared down at her. "Was he at home when you left?" he demanded in a desperate whisper.

She would not answer. She could not answer, for the moment he had spoken he put his hand tightly over her mouth, and then picked up a long roll of bandage and gagged her.

Suddenly the man smiled to himself again. He went noiselessly to the cabinet and took a little bottle from it, with a thick pad of cloth. He went to the end of the room she couldn't see, and she heard nothing; but a wave of fresh sweet night air poured over her. Then it was gone and the heavy air of the room settled around her again. The gag hurt badly and it was so dry. Her mouth was so dry. She twisted her head and budge. She pulled at her wrists until the bonds cut into them, but she could not move.

That would be Michael, alone up there. Alone, come to find her. She couldn't warn him. Michael.
The light went out. The world was black again, forgotten.
The sweet night air revived her. He had left the door open, this time when he came in, and a cool breeze swept gently over her face. The water in the pan bubbled and sang.

She turned her head.
There was a sort of wide bench against the wall on her left-hand side, opposite the big cabinet. On the bench Michael was half sitting-propped up against the wall. By the time Michael opened his eyes his feet were bound firmly together and his hands were bound firmly behind his back; but worse than that, his wrists were tied to a ring in the wall.

Michael had seen Tuck lying there on the table. He had stared at her with terrified eyes for a moment, and then he had smiled at her his own, dear impish smile. Tuck's heart skipped a beat, and then the warm blood flowed through her veins again and she felt alive. Her brain worked again.

The man spoke. "You were alone?"

"Oh, no," Michael said. "Do you think I'm crazy?"

"Indeed? You lie well, Forrester."

"And you? What am I to call you? Murchison?"

"Whatever you like. It won't make the slightest difference. Luck

SCALLOP HIPLINE

BY ANNE ADAMS

Here's a gay deceiver in a slimming housecoat. From the back approach, Anne Adams' Pattern 4368 looks like a trim two-piece style with a scallop-edged jacket. But closer inspection reveals that the scallops simply end the long bodice, and continue around to either side-front, in a decorative, slenderizing hipline. The center-front panel of the bodice forms one piece with the skirt—so easy to cut and stitch. And more scallops may appear at collar and cuffs, which look refreshing in contrast. Another attractive version shows the neckline cut into a becoming square, with pretty ruffling at both neck and sleeves.

Pattern 4368 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 3 1/2 yards 25 inch fabric and 1 yard contrast. went on. "I tried to work with animals because of the absurd prejudice against the risking of human life. How foolish that is. There are literally millions of lives that would be better sacrificed to science. If they had given me only a dozen subjects to work on, I should have been successful long ago. Do you know what it would mean? It would mean that we could create perfect beings in the laboratory. Perfect—a race of gods. The operation, of course, is very painful. Very painful, indeed. You can understand that it must be."

"You will hang for this," Michael said. His voice was calm, and he had stopped struggling. He sat quiet. He must have found out that it was useless.

"I doubt it. You see, after tonight, I shall do nothing more. This is the final test. Once before I thought I could say that, but unfortunately, my subject struggled rather violently before I could induce him to come here, and I was forced to give him a severe blow. He has been very ill ever since—rather, he is still now, but in no physical condition as yet, to stand the operation. I have had to keep him drugged in order to keep him from escaping or making a noise, and his nerves are not in a good state at all. Still, I expected to use him eventually. But I shall not have to now. If the operation fails on your wife and anything unforeseen happens, there will still be yourself." He made a little courtly bow. "Two such

Civic Group Will Try to Improve Rink Facilities

Investigation Authorized To Develop Better Skating Places

An attempt to improve ice rink facilities in Appleton will be made following an investigation authorized at a meeting of the executive board and committees of the Appleton Civic association last night, according to Abe Sigman, president.

The sports and outdoor activities committee will make the investigation and will report to the executive board within a week. Sigman said the association believes skating facilities in Appleton are inadequate and are not properly supervised, preventing many skaters from making use of the available rinks.

The association's objective for 1940 is to determine what Appleton needs in the way of a recreational program and to provide supervised recreation centers for young and old at the smallest possible cost.

The recreational survey committee of the association, along with a similar committee of the city council and the board of education is working on the problem. Sigman said. The committees will investigate and report on the program most adaptable for Appleton.

A study will be made of recreation programs in other Wisconsin cities, programs carried on by boards of education using school facilities, others supervised by recreation commissions, park boards, under WPA programs and combinations of all of them.

Meeting with the executive board last night were the committees on recreational survey, activities, publicity, sports, education and finance.

'CHARLIE' BAAKE IS STILL LIVELY

New London—Still in proud possession of the distinguishing sheriff's hat he wore 45 years ago, C. H. "Charlie" Baake, 82, sheriff of Outagamie county from 1894 to 1896 and the only surviving charter member of the Appleton Elks club, is shown above in a characteristic pose in a New London barber shop, digesting the latest political news coming over the airwaves. He will be an honored guest at the "burning of the mortgage" celebration planned by the Elks club Friday evening to mark the clearing of the organization's indebtedness. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Only Surviving Charter Member Of Elks Club Is Former Sheriff

New London — When Appleton Elks gather Friday evening to celebrate the clearing of the lodge's indebtedness on its clubhouse and properties, C. H. "Charlie" Baake, one-time sheriff of Outagamie county and the only surviving charter member of the Appleton Elks club, will be a special guest.

"Charlie," as he is called by all who know him, was a well-known figure in the early history of New London, Hortonville and Appleton, and he is probably best known for his two years as sheriff of Outagamie county at Appleton from 1894 to 1896.

Now 82, Charlie has been passing his declining years in peaceful reminiscence here at New London where he returned about a dozen years ago. He rooms in a part of his own home at 409 Shawano street and spends most of his time between two of his favorite haunts.

Plan No Inquest In 2 Lake Deaths

Double Funeral Will be Held at Chilton for Drowning Victims

No inquest will be held in the deaths of Edward George, 37, Chilton, and Myron Wilby, 40, Brotherhood, who drowned Sunday afternoon when their car broke through the ice on Lake Winnebago, two miles west of Brotherhood, according to the Calumet county sheriff's department. The men's bodies were recovered yesterday but the car still is submerged in 16 feet of water in the lake.

condition, anyway. We ought to forget about that and try to keep what we've got—that's a man-sized job in itself."

The president of the county highway commission's association, George J. Theiler of Lincoln county (Merrill), agreed with O'Rourke that it was futile to try to recover the $27,000,000.

Theiler declared the proposal to change the highway commission to a one-man job was "ridiculous." He criticized also a proposal to reduce the number of division offices. One, he said would be in Milwaukee and another in Madison. The third would go where political pressure was the strongest. Committeemen from northern counties said they feared they would be a long way from an office.

Commercial Club Reviews Another Year's Activity

Organization at Hortonville Holds 11th Annual Banquet

Hortonville — The Hortonville Commercial club looked back on another year of widened activity at its 11th annual banquet last night in Community hall.

Judge Fred V. Heinemann of Appleton, the principal speaker, told the 125 members and guests that he had planned to talk about how to organize and operate a commercial club, but after hearing the reports of officers had concluded that Hortonville was not in need of advice. He complimented the club highly on its activities particularly on its purchase of the Hortonville fair grounds as a community park. He suggested that perhaps money could be raised to pay the balance due on the property by asking public spirited men to donate sums of money in return for having pine trees in the grove named for them.

The club, which has 66 members, reelected M. F. Ziehm, president, and the two other officers, Milford Steffen, vice president, and Norman Helterhoff, secretary-treasurer.

Directors elected were Mr. Ziehm, Byron Ziehm, Byron Barain, Carleton Schneider and Sidney Miller. The three retiring directors, Earl Koenig, Lloyd Nickel and L. F. Matheys automatically become members of the advisory board.

Ziehm reviewed the club's program during the year, putting particular emphasis upon acquisition of Hortonville fair grounds as a community park. He expressed the hope that a new name might be found for the property and that a proper dedication service would be held.

Mr. Ziehm also reviewed the huge homecoming last summer at which Senator Gerald P. Nye, a former Hortonville resident was the chief speaker.

Other activities during the year included sponsorship of the Boy Scout movement, community Christmas decorations, community skating rink, and a summer dance. The report indicated a crowded and successful year for the club, and the report of the secretary indicated a healthy treasury condition.

Guests at the banquet were Mr. and Mrs. John R. Riedl, Appleton, Mr. and Mrs. M. Manley and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Kuether, Shiocton. Manley is secretary of the Shiocton Community club and Kuether, treasurer.

Appleton Takes On Winter Cloak As Snow Appears

Comparatively Mild Temperatures Prevail in This Vicinity

A belated snowfall that looked like it meant business got underway this forenoon and succeeded in giving Appleton and vicinity a wintry appearance this afternoon. "Better late than never" was the general comment of winter sport enthusiasts who had been watching skis and toboggans collect dust the last few weeks.

With the advent of snow, traffic authorities urged motorists to exercise extreme caution because of the increased driving hazards.

Cloudy weather is predicted tonight and Wednesday along with occasional light snow.

Comparatively mild temperatures prevailed today with mercury in the thermometer on the roof of the Post-Crescent building registering 23 degrees early this afternoon. Maximum and minimum marks for the 24-hour period preceding 9 o'clock this morning were 29 degrees at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and 12 degrees at 10 o'clock last night according to records at the power plant of the Wisconsin Michigan Power company.

Highest and lowest temperatures in the nation yesterday as reported at official weather bureau stations were 75 degrees at Miami, Fla., and 12 degrees below zero at Bismarck, N. D., according to the Associated Press.

SUB-ZERO WAVE

Chicago —(AP)— Winter jabbed its sub-zero finger into the nation's mid-section today.

While residents farther north enjoyed comparatively mild weather for early January, early risers in Toledo, Ohio, Indianapolis and Ft. Wayne, Ind., Lansing, Mich., and Columbia and St. Joseph, Mo., found the mercury at zero or below.

Duluth, Minn., at the head of the Great Lakes, had 16 above while Ft. Wayne, south of the lower end of Lake Michigan, had 5 below. Sault Ste. Marie, on the northern Michigan-Ontario border, reported 18 above, but Lansing, on the lower Michigan peninsula, chilled at 1 below. So did Indianapolis, farther south.

The coldest reporting spot in the nation at 6:30 a. m. was Burlington, Vt., with six below; Devils Lake, N. D., had 5 below; Bismarck, N. D., 4 below. It was 2 below in Toledo.

A frozen fog turned Quincy, Ill., into a winter wonderland. The fine particles of moisture froze into fine crystalline coatings on trees, shrubs and buildings. The phenomenon occurred in 3 above weather that froze the Mississippi river and bay with ice 9 inches thick.

Continued cloudiness and some light snow was forecast for the middle west, with no important changes in conditions during the next 36 hours.

Precipitation during the past 24 hours covered broad areas west of the Rocky mountains and many northern and east central portions of the country. Eureka, Calif., had 1.09 inch.

Strong Man Tells Students How To Live and Develop Strength

Arthur Santell, who is reputed to be America's strongest athlete, amazed students of Appleton High school Monday by tearing a large 1500-page telephone directory into eighths, driving two or three 20-penny spikes through a heavy plank with his fist, breaking a heavy steel chain which several students were first permitted to attempt to break in a tug-of-war and lifting a student off a table with his teeth.

Santell explained however, that his exhibition of strength and skill was presented merely to dramatize his faith in clean living and healthful habits. During his address Santell outlined the fundamental rules of intelligent living habits for building good posture, strengthening the hand muscles and developing strong backs.

In his introduction Santell explained that he became interested in physical education because at one time he was below average in health and strength. He is 5 feet, 10 inches tall. It is his firm belief that good health is far more valuable than big muscles or mere strength. Santell was an outstanding attraction at the Chicago Century of Progress, the California Exposition and the Great Lakes Exposition. He appeared at the New York World's fair this summer.

Simple Questions Are Significant, Pastor Tells Club

Can be Used as "Guide to Character," Dr. Culver Says

Five apparently simple questions which are used in obtaining information on people have far deeper implications and can be used as "a guide to character and the inner life," Dr. Harry Culver, pastor of the Methodist church, said in a talk before the Appleton Lions club yesterday noon in the Conway hotel.

Speaking during a "friendship day" luncheon at the club, the pastor listed these questions as centering on a person's name, age, worth, friends, and place of residence.

Dr. Culver said that "fathers and mothers need not be concerned about leaving their children money. Leave them the priceless heritage of a good name. The greatest names of history have belonged to men who were poor. Witness Abraham Lincoln."

The speaker said that "years are not the measure of a man's life, or even of his age," that finding fault with youth and losing interest in play are signs of approaching age, and that a sign of perpetual youth "is to keep the mind open and the heart fixed on beauty and God."

The pastor said that one "may lose all material possession and still be rich, rich in treasures of the heart, boys and girls, sympathy, character, and the affection of others."

One of the tragedies of life is to "approach the end and not have friends," Dr. Culver asserted. "The best way to win friends is to be a friend to others."

He told the club "we should be grateful these days that we live in the United States of America" and that it is "possible to live in a large house and still have cramped and narrow quarters for the soul."

Aldermen Want Decision on Use of School Auditorium

ALDERMAN J. J. FRANZKE, discussing the policy or lack of policy, of the board of education on the use of the high school auditorium for worthy public programs, this morning said:

"It's about time the school board did something about it so that people will know whether the auditorium is to be available."

The school board has received several requests from responsible organizations for the use of the auditorium but so far, has not formulated a policy concerning its use.

Alderman Franzke favored opening the auditorium to responsible organizations and was supported by Alderman Frank Weinkauf who asked: "What did we build it for if we're not going to use it?"

"We built a million dollar school and how are some of us going to use the building if it isn't opened to public programs?" Alderman Franzke said. "Many of us do not have children attending the school, and yet we helped pay for the building."

Both aldermen agreed that programs allowed in the auditorium should be made to cover the cost of opening the building at night. However, both said that in isolated cases when the public might be admitted free for a program of general educational interest, the city could absorb the cost.

Professor of Economics Is Lodge Speaker

PROF. SELIG PERLMAN, economics professor at the University of Wisconsin, was the speaker at an open forum meeting sponsored by Fox river lodge, No. 208, B'nai B'rith, last evening in Montefiore social center. About 150 persons attended. Professor Perlman, who was exchange professor in Cardiff, Wales, in 1938-1939, told of his impressions and experiences in England where he was during the Munich conference and the period preceding it. He lectured at Oxford and Cambridge.

The speaker said that there was a great change in attitude on the part of the British people after Hitler marched into Prague, for up to that time they had been convinced that they should mediate rather than go to war, but after the invasion of Czechoslovakia the people felt that Hitler was out to widen his sphere beyond what he had claimed.

Professor Perlman said that at first the British people were behind Neville Chamberlain because England was unprepared for war, and he added that there is a strong feeling that the Munich pact was the greatest strategic move of the entire period for it gave England time to prepare for war. He closed by saying that Chamberlain is not typical of the general run of prime ministers in England for he comes from the business or commercial class.

Latin-American Education Is Showing Progress, League Told

LATIN-AMERICA has experienced a great twentieth century awakening, Mrs. W. A. Witte said in a paper entitled "Highlights in the Development of Education in Latin-America" presented before the Pan-American League Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. James B. Wagg, E. College avenue.

The educational and other leaders are thinking and acting, Mrs. Witte stated, and education is no longer considered a privilege belonging to the elite. The rich and poor alike are awake to the educational needs, she added, and the schools in some of these countries are used to administer social welfare and relief.

The general trend in the Latin-American schools seems to be away from the traditional humanistic and classical education and toward subjects of practical value such as will prepare students for business careers and the trades, Mrs. Witte said.

Tells About Brazil

Mrs. John Appling, drawing on personal observation and experience in the schools of Brazil, gave information on the status of education in that country and displayed souvenirs such as lace, wood work, butterfly wings and coins. She said that because the schools of Brazil are federally controlled and supervised by departments are political appointees, the best interests of the school are not always served. Frequent changes in administration make for instability of educational development, she added.

Mrs. Appling explained that the state of Sao Paulo is the most advanced educationally in Brazil. The university is a sort of federation of separate schools, she said, and besides the elementary and secondary schools and the university, there are many research institutions working on such problems as trees and fine woods, serums for snake and spider bites and small-pox, and the like.

In her discussion of current events, Mrs. Clyde Chapelle called attention to the Pan-American roadway from Laredo, Texas, to Panama City which is to be completed in 1941, and in the construction of which the various countries are co-operating. She spoke of the beneficial effect of the recent conference for retail trade merchants, of the proposed opening of display rooms in New York for Latin-American products and of a conference in Washington of economic experts from 21 republics. The status of Secretary of State Hull's trade agreements was reviewed, and also the attitude of South American radio stations toward the increased activity of the United States in Latin-American broadcasts.

Following the ceremony a dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents for immediate relatives. The event will be celebrated by a wedding dance this evening at Brant.

Jansen-Schupferling

Miss Margaret Jansen, Berkeley, Calif., daughter of Jan Jansen, 1125 S. Madison street, Appleton, and Robert Mortell, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mortell, Chilton, were united in marriage at 6:45 this morning at St. Mary church, Stockbridge, in a ceremony performed by the Rev. Michael Gonnering. Miss Irene Mortell, sister of the bridegroom, attended the bride and Eugene Mortell, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Pelton-Murphy

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Elsie Pelton, daughter of Mr. Elsie Fadden, Milwaukee, and F. L. Fadden, Neenah, to Jay Wilson Murphy, Milwaukee, formerly of Fond du Lac. The couple was married Dec. 25 at St. Stephen's Episcopal church, Milwaukee, the Rev. H. H. Haug performing the ceremony. Washington — (U) — Representatives Reid F. Murray and Stephen Boes, Wisconsin Republicans, were named yesterday by Representative Hope (R-Kas.), chairman of a special Republican agriculture study committee, to serve on a sub-committee to investigate tobacco growers' problems.

"SCARLETT" MAY WED ACTOR

Vivian Leigh, the Scarlett O'Hara of the movie "Gone With the Wind," and Laurence Olivier, English actor she is expected to marry after she is divorced by her present husband, are shown in Hollywood as both appeared on a radio program in connection with the annual New York film critics' awards. Herbert Leigh Holman, a barrister, has filed suit in the English courts against Miss Leigh and named Olivier as co-respondent.

'Romeo' Will Wed His 'Juliet' Even if It Takes Court Action

San Francisco — (U) — John B. Adams, a Romeo with a court order intended to restrain his prospective mother-in-law from blocking his romance, vowed today he would marry his Juliet if he had to appeal to the supreme court.

Adams, a 32-year-old collection agency executive, asserted that his intended bride, Isabel Deshler, 21, was kept from him against her will by her mother, Mrs. Louise Deshler.

Superior Judge Lyle T. Jacks decided the superior court should determine if Cupid were being thwarted illegally, so he ordered Mrs. Deshler to bring her daughter before him Friday for a hearing.

"Isabel would marry me in a minute if she could get her mother's consent," said Adams. "And I'm going to marry her if I have to go to the supreme court to do it."

He said he had pounded on the Deshler door and telephoned incessantly since Thursday, but his only luck was the statement from Isabel's sister, Louise, that his fiancé had left town.

"I don't believe it," said Adams, who added that his idea for the court action came from the similar case in New York involving George Lowther and the former Eileen Herick. They were married last week.

The Deshler side of the dispute was a bit clouded. Mrs. Deshler answered the door when interviews were sought and called Louise, Louise summoned brother William, who said he knew nothing of the matter except that Isabel was not at home. Nobody called Isabel and neither did she appear.

U. S. Uruguay Trade

Negotiations Collapse

Washington — (U) — Negotiations for a reciprocal trade treaty between the United States and Uruguay have broken down, on top of the collapse of efforts to reach an agreement with Argentina.

The Argentine negotiations were ended last weekend after disagreement over placing customs quotas on typical Argentine products such as linseed and canned beef.

"Because of the similarity in important respects of the export trade of Uruguay and Argentina with the United States," the state department said last night, "it has been found necessary in view of the recent termination of negotiations with Argentina to terminate also the negotiations with Uruguay."

guess the real reason is that, like the small boy, they didn't want to go to heaven with this bunch."

The president received his greatest applause when he declared: "Most of those who complain now were the shouting optimists of 1929. I do not believe that the American people who swallowed that canned optimism in 1929 will swallow pessimism in 1940—particularly out of the same can."

JACKSON'S SPEECH

Cleveland — (U) — President Roosevelt's nominee for attorney general believes the chief executive should bid his time in announcing for or against a third time.

Robert H. Jackson, addressing a Jackson day dinner here last night said he did not know what the president's answer would be. And he indicated that, so far as he knew, President Roosevelt had not made up his mind.

Jackson said he hoped the president would not "even make within himself any decision at this time."

"We don't want the greatest asset of the Democratic party put in hock," Jackson asserted in urging the president remain a "free man." The American people want Mr. Roosevelt, before he decides on whether he will retire, to know such important things as these—the state of the international situation; what issues arise in congress affecting his program and the public welfare; and more than all, what would be the consequences of his decision in terms of party policy and leadership.

Must Move Forward

"The New Deal must go forward—not perhaps at the same pace, and certainly not without heed to the lessons of its own experience."

He said it was futile to expect to win elections by converting Republicans, asserting:

"Four elections out of five indicate that we should begin our calculations by conceding any candidate they (the Republicans) name, on any kind of platform, an all-weather, dependable vote of around said after mentioning blackouts and other precautions. He drew laughter a moment later when he said:

"Some people are disappointed. Perhaps."

"I do not consider that the risk of air raids is over or diminished," he said, "and I am certain that if we should make a capital mistake if we became lax in our policy or changed it..."

Empire United

The presence of England's dominion soldiers in France is evidence, he said, of the unanimous approval of the cause for which the empire went to war.

"We are at war. Vast numbers of men armed with the most powerful weapons which science can devise are watching one another from behind their defenses. "From time to time we hear the sound of guns. But there is no general engagement. We do not know how long that will last."

"There are individual conflicts which bear ample witness to the daring and courage of the men who are taking part."

"There are daily reconnaissances far out over the sea into the enemy's territory... and those expeditions are a high test of courage and endurance. But in the air as on the land we know that what is happening is merely the preliminary to the struggle."

England Rules Seas

It was only on the sea, Chamberlain said, that England "could see the trend of hostilities."

"If we take a survey we can look upon it with satisfaction. The oceans of the world have been swept clear of German shipping."

The prime minister spoke from notes.

German shipping is either bottled up or confined to Baltic ports, he declared.

"If we subtract from our losses by enemy action... our gain by capture from the enemy or by new ships or by transfer from foreign flags we have lost 132,000 tons, less than 1 per cent of our merchant fleet."

"Every day, every day now there are passing 11,000,000 tons of British shipping over the several oceans of the world."

"In this period we have lost two large warships, the Royal Oak and the Courageous, and several smaller vessels."

Chamberlain said "our command of the sea is unimpaired and the defeat of the Graf Spee in one of the finest naval actions in all our history, followed by her self-destruction rather than face a renewal of the fight, has not only cleared the south Atlantic of that raider but it has inflicted irreparable damage upon German naval prestige in the world."

"Meanwhile inexorable pressure of sea-power upon the enemy has added to her difficulties to carry on the war."

GEENEN'S

The Creeping Man

by Frances Shelley Wees

young and healthy specimens, both mentally and physically, are all that any scientist could desire. If the experiment fails twice tonight, I shall merely set fire to this basement room and leave it as it is. I shall be convinced that mine is not the hand to carry out the research. But we will not fail—tonight."

He was ready. He wheeled the little table over close to Tuck. He pulled open a drawer in the table and took out a white mask which he unrolled from its sterile wrappings and tied across his face.

"Perhaps," he said to Michael "you will find this a little trying since this lady is your wife. But you can scarcely fail to find it interesting. With this knife I shall make the first incision, a small three-cornered one at the base of the brain. But first, of course, I must sterilize the area."

"You Devil!"

He turned her head gently away from Michael and she felt his hands at the back of her neck. He untied the gag and took it off. "It is in my way," he said regretfully. Her mouth was stiff. Then she felt the coolness of water on the back of her head, and, in a moment, the scrape of a razor.

She heard him move. She knew he was still trying to break loose. He never could. Her own hands cut into her wrists and ankles.

The man laid down the razor. He picked up the shining knife. And in that instant Michael threw the severed bonds from his hands and sprang.

The man gave a cry like the roar of a wild beast as he went down beneath Michael. Tuck did not see that battle on the cement floor, but as she lay bound and helpless on the table she pictured it and agonized for Michael. The other man was bigger, and very strong. He had a grip like steel.

"Michael, Michael," she called in agony.

The other man was bigger and very strong, but Michael was fighting for Tuck and for her life. He got on top at last and pounded that dark head again and again on the cement; and then he dragged him and tied him, in turn, to the ring in the wall, where he stood with frightful blazing eyes.

"You devil!" Michael panted. And then he turned to Tuck. As he lifted her tenderly in his arms from the table she clung to him and choked out, "Michael... how... I can't believe... Michael darling! Oh, you are really—Oh, Michael!"

"Why, sweetheart, my fingers were free, d'you see, and I was sort of half sitting there, and my jackknife was in my pants, and nearly died getting it out—and cutting those damn things—for fear he'd hear."

And at that moment two things happened. The first was the appearance of an apparition from that inner room, the figure of a tall, ghastly pale man with cadaverous cheeks and sunken eyes. He supported himself against the door, said, "So you've got him at last," and faintly. And the second was the score of many feet rushing into the house above, and Bunny's voice calling, "Tuck! Tuck! Michael, where are you?"

Michael flung open the door and shouted, and in a moment the basement was filled with people: strangely Duncan Murchison was there with the Commissioner, the District Attorney, a group of policemen, and Bunny with Agamemnon in her arms.

"I had to bring him," she explained, "because I thought perhaps if we couldn't find you he could. But we saw Michael's boat and the handkerchief tied to the tree on the path below."

Michael held Tuck in his arms still. She leaned her head against him and the room whirled round her.

Duncan Murchison had raced across the room and dropped down on his knees beside the sick man from the inner room. He lifted the drooping head and held it on his arm.

"My God," he said brokenly, and there was deep silence at the sound of his voice. "It's my brother, Edgar!"

The District Attorney frowned. He took his hand from Michael's shoulder. He turned and surveyed the icy rigid figure of that other, gowned in white and tied against the wall.

"Then who is that?" he cried. "That?" said Michael, a hand reached out to tear the operating mask from the angry face. "Oh, that is Dr. McBain!"

UPSETTING A TRADITION

Sacramento, Calif. — (U) — Throngs of migratory farm workers have created grave problems for California, but a sudden rise in the birth rate is not one of them. The entire state had only 1,000 more births the first nine months of this year than in the same period in 1933.

The Department of Public Health reported. Some of the counties most heavily populated by migrants showed a decrease in births.

SLIGHT ERROR

Charlotte, N. C. — (U) — A Negro living in Philadelphia sent the county tax office here a $22 money order after the office sent her a 22 cent bill for taxes on a vacant lot.

Authorities wrote her, and she replied with a quarter and the explanation that she just naturally thought taxes had gone up. She got her money order and three cents change by return mail.

KIND LADY

Shanghai — (U) — Charged with having repeatedly burned a 9-year-old Chinese slave-girl with lighted cigarettes, Mabel Chen, Chinese common law wife of a Filipino, was sentenced in court here to six months' imprisonment. The woman, former taxi dancer, said she had "disciplined" the child for being slow in carrying out errands.

Trends, Principles of Technocracy Discussed

Joseph Doerfler, 1020 W. Eighth street, and Mrs. Morris Sawyer, Neenah, talked at a meeting of the Appleton unit of Technocracy, Inc., last night at the Wettengel building. Doerfler discussed the implications of technological trends and Mrs. Sawyer talked on the principles of Technocracy. Herbert G. Wettengel presided.

MOTHER OF INVENTION

Gallop, N. M. — (U) — Beset by a howling storm on a New Mexico highway, Charley Huff, news editor of the Gallup Daily Independent, thinks he may have discovered a new windshield defroster.

Slipping and sliding around the road behind fogged glass, he ran his fingers through his hair and wiped off the windshield. It remained clear.

Huff thinks the natural oil in his hair may have done the trick.

RODENT RODEO

Ionis, Mo. — (U) — A community rat extermination campaign at Ionis destroyed hundreds of rodents. Dogs were used to locate nests and where it was possible the carbon monoxide gas from automobile exhausts was piped into burrows. In one barn the floor was ripped up after gas had been piped under it and 66 dead rats were found crowded under 64 feet of floor space.

Menasha Opposes Bulldogs Tonight

New London to Invade Bluejay Gymnasium For League Tilt

Menasha — Menasha High school cagers will seek their third Northeast Wisconsin conference victory of the season at 8 o'clock tonight against New London High school at the Menasha gymnasium. Officials for the game will be Allen Davey and E. J. Schneider of Oshkosh.

Probable starts for the Bluejays will be Henry Osiewalski and John Skalmowski at forwards, Ray Wipich at center, and Gus Block and Wilbur Merkle at guards. Although that team will sacrifice something in height, it will put on the floor the aggregation which has shown the best ball-handling ability as well as the most speed. The Jays will have to use those qualities to battle the Bulldogs who will have a decided edge in height.

Reserve teams of the two schools will battle at 7 o'clock tonight. The Menasha reserves will be seeking their second victory of the season. They defeated Clintonville reserve by a narrow margin and lost decisions to Neenah, Shawano, and Kaukauna reserves in the conference and to Green Bay West out of the conference.

Hillard Kozlowski starred for the Bluejays reserves against Kaukauna Friday night, collecting six points, Edward Naleway, Clement Gavinski, Donald Drucks, and William Riley are other likely starters for the reserves. The New London reserves won their first conference preliminary Friday night, defeating West DePere 12 to 11.

Last year the union observed its fifth anniversary of organization with 200 members at the meeting. The membership has passed the 500 mark in the six years of its existence.

The St. Joseph team leads the league with five straight victories. The Junior Zephyrs have four victories and one defeat. They were upset by St. Mary's of Appleton, the only victory scored so far by the Appleton quintet.

Shamrocks in Race

St. Patrick's of Menasha, co-champions of the conference last season, also will bid for a share of first place Wednesday night. The Shamrocks will play the St. Mary's of Appleton team and will go into a 3-way tie for first place if they win and the Junior Zephyrs manage to trip the St. Joseph team.

The Shamrocks have won four games and lost a 19 to 17 decision to St. Joseph for their only defeat.

In the final game at St. Mary's gymnasium Wednesday night St. John's of Menasha will play St. John's of Little Chute. The Menasha team has suffered two defeats and has dropped to third place in the conference. The Little Chute team can tie for third place with a victory Wednesday night.

The fourth game of the week, also scheduled for St. Mary's gymnasium, will pit Sacred Heart of Appleton against Holy Name of Kimberly, who tied the Shamrocks for first place last year. The Holy Name team has won a single game and the Sacred Heart team has five straight defeats.

Neenah Cagers to Meet Truckers in Conference Game

Rockets Seek Seventh Straight Victory Friday Night

Neenah — Only one more game looms between Neenah High school's championship bound basketball eleven and an unmarred record during the first half of the cage season, and when the Rockets tangle with Clintonville in the final game of the first half of the schedule, Friday night at Clintonville, Coach Ole Jorgensen's quintet will be favored heavily.

While the Rockets are in first place with a 2-game lead, the Truckers are in the Northeastern Wisconsin conference cellar, having lost four straight games.

Neenah, on the other hand, will be seeking its seventh straight victory and its sixth conference win against Clintonville. In winning games from Appleton, Kaukauna, New London, West DePere, Menasha and Shawano, the Rockets have collected 177 points, 62 points more than their opponents who have amassed 115.

Hesselman Is High

Captain Harland Hesselman, Neenah's ace and the conference's leading scorer, has made 87 of these points, while Buxton Kettering, forward, has counted 21. The other players' totals are Charles Kettering, forward 15; Richard Miller, guard 18; Julius Hertzfeldt, guard 19; Ed Winkelman, forward 11; Milton Luka, center 2; Dan Hoyman, forward 2, and Tom Christofferson, guard 2.

As Neenah scored a decisive 31 to 21 victory over Shawano last Friday, Hesselman, center, counted 20 points to take over the lead in conference scoring, displacing Bill Reed, Shawano, whom he held to six points. With the exception of the Kaukauna game in which he scored seven points, Hesselman has been posting high scores in every contest, scoring 13 against Appleton, 16 against New London and as many against West DePere and 15 against Menasha.

Coach Jorgensen undoubtedly will start Hesselman at center, Winkelman and B. Kettering at forwards, and Hertzfeldt and Miller at guards against the Truckers.

Coach Ivan Williams' second team, which also has won six straight games and five straight conference tilts, will meet the Clintonville reserves in the preliminary.

His starting lineup probably will be composed of Hauke and O'Neill at forwards, Johnson at center, and Burris and Luebbert at guards.

Confidence Is Key To 1940 Business, Neenah Club Told

Milwaukee Economist Sees Promising Outlook For First Six Months

Neenah — Declaring that business conditions for the first six months of 1940 show promise, Francis W. Dickey, Milwaukee economist, said in a talk at the noon luncheon meeting at the Neenah club Monday that "The question of capital for 1940 is: Will the holders of capital have enough confidence to invest it?"

Contending that it is more important to evaluate changes in fundamentals than predict how business will be six months from now, Dickey said that "If you appreciate the changes, it will be a more valuable store of information on the economics of the country than keeping track of current markets to form ideas on what will happen in a few months."

"Business conditions for the first six months of this year show promise because of relatively low prices, high production and superabundance of money," he said. He added, however, that "If there is a sudden rise in prices, it will cast doubt upon the future."

Other factors include the fact that factory payrolls buy more than in 1938 and 1937 and that a sharp rise has occurred in the capital goods industry, such as equipment, machinery and heavy engineering contracts. "This is needed," he pointed out.

Dickey, a former editorial writer, said that other contributing factors are a sharp rise in steel and electrical equipment.

A depending factor on the outlook for this year is whether new social issues can be sold to the public in any large bulk, for money from private investors is more potent than government pump priming. A government should provide opportunity for private initiative and pave the way and encourage development of industry in a country, he said.

As far as the war is concerned, it hasn't hurt the United States economically nor has there been any profit. "If the United States stays out of war, we can avoid inflation, but we will have it if we go into the war. It is to our economy interest to stay out."

Dickey, who is employed by the Leslie L. Newton investment counsel firm, and a former faculty member of Iowa State college and Western Reserve college, Cleveland, said that economically, the factor of change, which goes on for years without realization, is the most important fundamental.

Rapid Changes

Since 1900, there have been great and rapid changes in agriculture, from the extensive to the intensive, for before the turn of the century it required 70 per cent of the populace to feed the nation and now it requires only 20 per cent. A large amount of labor from the farms was set free and had to be utilized, and the automobile industry and its ramifications took care of a large number of those released from farm work. It never was thought, however, that the automobile would have such a great effect upon the railroads and traction firms, and it wasn't realized until the depression came. Many other industries reached a peak and then decayed because of competition, such as rayon to cotton and silk.

The industries which presently are going up fast are the airplane, Diesel power, plastics and building.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is offering in their new musical "Broadway Melody of 1940," tops in taps in presenting Fred Astaire and Eleanor Powell.

By Jimmie Fidler

Hollywood—Almost every day some screen-struck youngster comes to my office to pose the shop-worn question, "How can I get into pictures?" Today's visitor was typical—a girl of seventeen or eighteen, very pretty, vain, exceedingly ambitious—and totally lacking in professional experience.

She cited the case of Maureen O'Hara, a "best bet" for 1940. "Miss O'Hara's only eighteen," she argued. "She's good-looking but (unblushingly) so am I. If she can make a hit in only two pictures, why couldn't I, if some one would give me a chance?"

I tried to point out a few facts. Maureen O'Hara's "hit" is not the result of only two pictures. Before coming to the screen, she spent five years with the famous Abbey

Players of Dublin, acting every kind of role her age would permit. She acquired poise, voice control, knowledge of makeup, mastery of "timing"—in short, learned the hundred and one tricks every finished actor must have at his command. She came to pictures already equipped with assets that a novice cannot gain in a dozen years' hap-hazard miming for the cameras.

My visitor didn't seem to get the point. "I'm not interested in the stage—I want to be in pictures," she insisted. "I didn't think you'd be willing to give me any REAL advice."

I suppose I have one more caddy.

CUFF NOTES: Looks like Mike (radio announcer) Frankovitch's gift of his Beverly Hills home to Binnie Barnes certifies their wedding date.

Doris Nolan has signed for a leading role in Alexander Woolcott's road company presenting "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

Years of exile evidently failed to tame Erich von Stroheim's temperament—he's banned all set visitors while he's before the cameras. . . Rosemary of the Lanes pooh-poohs those Buddy Westmore engagement plans—but he doesn't. . . Joan Crawford's favorite NY escort is again Franchot Tone, who is such a nice guy, now he's cured of Hollywood boils.

Charlie Ruggles tells about taking his 7-year-old nephew, Wesley (son of Arline Judge and Director Wes Ruggles) to the zoo. There the kid saw a herd of pachyderms for the first time. He stared for a few seconds, then cried: "My gosh! No wonder they call 'em elephants—they're so big!"

Wolverine Guards Snipe At Basket to Decide 44-39 Contest

ENGLUND STARS

Badger Center Comes Through With 5 Goals And 5 Free Throws

MADISON — (7) — A pair of backcourt snipers, whose marksmanship accounted for 14 points, were to a large degree responsible for the University of Wisconsin's 44 to 39 victory over Michigan in a Big Ten basketball game here last night before about 8,000 spectators.

The Wolverine guards, Charles Pink and Herb Borgan, short of stature but brimful of aggressiveness, tallied seven points each in a game that normally would have ended in Wisconsin's favor had Pink and Borgan relied on taller front court mates for markers.

Lacking equal support from their own guards, Wisconsin's leading scorers, Gene Englund, center, and Bob Schwartz, forward, kept the battle close, however, with sparkling sallies until the last few minutes. The four Badger guards in action made a total of only six points with John Rundell alone accounting for five.

Englund's 15 points matched scoring by Mike Solfak, Michigan forward, both tallying five field goals and five free throws. Schwartz took runner-up honors with 11 points on four goals and three free shots.

Get 10 Free Throws

Michigan capitalized on 10 of its 19 chances from the free throw line, while Wisconsin scored on 13 of its 16 chances. Several successful Michigan free throws, however, came in the closing minutes when misses would have enabled the Badgers to overhaul their opponents. Schwartz was ejected on fouls in the late scramble.

After a slow start, Michigan led 16-15 at halftime and pressed ahead 32 to 23 midway in the last period. The Badgers shortened the gap to 34-31, but were unable to overcome that three point lead.

The victory was Michigan's second in conference competition. Wisconsin, which now has won one and lost one, will meet Purdue University at Lafayette, Ind., Saturday night. The next home game will be with Indiana Monday.

GRINNELL, Ripon, and Carleton continue to pace the fast Midwest conference basketball race as the nine teams plunge into a week of straight league activity. Of the three teams originally rated as the best, only Grinnell is accepting the honor. The Pioneers have taken their three starts and will be at home for their next two games. Cornell and Monmouth, the other two favorites have yet to win a game, the latter having tried four times. It is hard to believe that the coaches and veterans of these good teams of last year can remain off the track much longer.

Ripon, the defending champions, are out in front again and averaging close to 40 points per game, their latest conquest being a win over the strong Beloit five. Coe, given little nod at the start is in fourth place, and Coach Willis Lamb is holding them up there with a band of new men. He recently dropped four lettersmen, last years regulars, off the squad. Knox and Beloit are a short reach from the top although both take to the road for tough assignments, the Swish into Iowa. Lawrence expects to take advantage of their big floor at home in an attempt to improve their record that suffered on long jaunts to Iowa and Minnesota. The Vikes next objective are their two state rivals, Ripon and Beloit.

Injuries Spoiling Hackney's Chances For Athletic Glory

Manhattan, Kas. — (7) — Elmer Hackney, four months ago an all-America football prospect and potential world shotput record breaker, is just another forlorn young man about the campus.

A knee injury robbed Kansas State's three-sport ace of his chances at gridiron glory. Now a badly sprained right wrist has cost him his highest ambition, a world record in the shot.

As a junior, Hackney pitched the iron ball to 18 records in 12 meets last year. He claimed a new American mark of 55 feet, 11 inches in the annual Kansas State-Nebraska-Kansas get together.

He won the National Collegiate championship with 55 feet, 10 1/2 inches at Los Angeles in June. That left him only one record to toss for this season, Jack Torrance's world mark of 57 feet, 1 inch.

He sprained his wrist so severely in the opening football game that it is doubtful whether he can use it for shot putting this year.

He also was Big Six heavyweight wrestling king his sophomore year but has given up the mat mauling to protect his knee. He intends to sign a Philadelphia Eagles contract and play pro football two years, then turn to coaching.

Gehrig at Mayors for Checkup, Treatment

Rochester, Minn. — (7) — After visiting Mayo clinic for a checkup yesterday, Lou Gehrig, former New York Yankee first baseman, said he would not return to New York before Wednesday. The former New York slugger explained that a new series of treatments for an ailment that forced his retirement from baseball last summer would require at least three days.

Only Three Teams in Big Ten Circuit Still Undefeated

PURDUE COPS, 49-32

Defeats Ohio State; Indiana Finds Iowa Hawkeyes Easy

BY TOM SILER
CHICAGO — (7) — The Big Ten basketball chase is only four days old, but seven teams already lost at least one game in the titular battle.

The results of two nights of league competition indicate the conference is in for a rousing fight down to the finish wire the first week in March.

The three teams still unbeaten in conference play are Indiana, the favored five, Michigan and Purdue. Most impressive of this trio so far has been the Boilermakers in whipping Northwestern and Ohio State, the defending champion, decisively.

Purdue amassed 80 points on these two teams and allowed them only 61, coasting to a 49 to 32 victory over the Buckeyes last night. Speed and smooth teamwork contributed largely to the wide margin of their superiority and figure to carry the Boilermaker past Wisconsin in their next test Saturday night.

Indiana swept Iowa aside last night, 45 to 30, Bill Menke leading the way with 11 points. The Hoosiers took a comfortable advantage in the first half and widened it almost as they pleased.

Michigan kept step with the two Indiana teams by outlasting a stubborn Wisconsin five, 44 to 39.

Northwestern bounced back from its opening round defeat by Purdue to whip Minnesota, 46 to 36. Elongated Dick Klein, sophomore center, scored 21 points, a new high for Big Ten competition this season.

Another sophomore, Don Carlson, led the Gopher attack with 10 points.

Illinois, victim of Indiana Saturday, barely nosed out a defensively-tight Chicago five, 34 to 33, on little Joe Frank's last minute field goal. Bill Hapac, the Illini's ace scorer and captain who missed the opener because of illness, played a few minutes.

Saturday's program, in addition to the Purdue-Wisconsin attraction, calls for Indiana at Minnesota, Iowa at Michigan, Chicago at Northwestern and Illinois at Ohio State.

The standings:

	W.	L.	Pts.	O.P.
Indiana	2	0	1,000	82
Michigan	2	0	1,000	74
Purdue	2	0	1,000	89

Little Chute Team Will Meet Hilbert

Game Scheduled Friday Evening in St. John Gymnasium

Little Chute — The local A. A. will play the Hilbert cagers at St. John gym Friday evening in a contest which promises to be a feature event in valley cage circles.

The visitors hold a win over the locals by a 6-point margin on the Hilbert floor. The Dutchmen have a chance to turn the tables in their meeting here Friday.

Johnny Rigney, Chicago White Sox twirler, will be interviewed on a public address system by Gordon McIntyre, sports editor of the Appleton Post-Crescent. Rigney is one of the visitors' ace cagers.

He is visiting at the home of Leo P. Fox of Chilton, another member of the Hilbert cagers who are setting up a string of victories over some of the best teams in this area, including Kimberly A. A. whom they defeated by 14 points.

Besides Rigney and Fox, the latter a member of the Clintonville Trunkers baseball team, Ham Baldock is a threat. Baldock scored 7 field goals against the locals in their meeting at Hilbert.

The A. A. will rely on their usual lineup which includes four veterans, Morse Van Dyke, Lefty Wilkenberg, Bernie Bongers and Ernie Versteegen. Mike Hammon, Duce Weyenberg, Joey Versteegen and Don Peeters joined the squad two seasons ago.

The preliminary will show Little Chute Theater cagers and the Kimberly A. A. reserves meeting for the second time. The Papermakers scored a 38 to 27 win in their first meeting.

Polo's Man Of The Decade

Hitchcock

BY DILLION GRAHAM
NEW YORK — (7) — The Thirties are gone. Looking back over that 10-year stretch we wonder who were the most outstanding athletes, which stars dominated the various sports. Who were sports' Men of the Decade?

Most of us recall the Twenties, the preceding decade often called the Golden Age of Sports. The Twenties produced some of history's greatest athletes. Those were booming times and everything was super - colossal. Record gates poured into arenas in almost every branch of athletics.

Let's push the curtain of time back to let us see again the 20's and 30's. Let's take them sport by sport, choose our Man of the Thirties and then compare him with those heroes of the Golden Age.

Double Decader
First consider polo. Of all those great athletes of the Twenties—Dempsey, Jones, Tilden, Nurni, Ruth, Weissmuller, Grange—only Tommy Hitchcock held on to dominate his game during the Thirties.

The hard, lean Long Islander is the Man of the Decade in polo — this decade, last decade or any other decade. He is the greatest polo player of all time.

Hitchcock, he of the iron forearms and the wrists of steel, was the world's best in the early Twenties and as the Forties march in he is still No. 1.

This smart and daring poloist was an established figure as far back as 1914 before the headlines had taken Dempsey, Tilden or Ruth into their black type. Those acres burst across the sports horizon with amazing feats and since have sailed into the past — Hitchcock, at 40, still is going strong.

Polo isn't a game that the masses cuddle to. So perhaps you don't realize just what a 10-goal rating means. Well, its baseball equivalent is a 400 hitter or a pitcher who is a 40-game winner. In golf a fellow who shot consistently in the 60's in the National Open championship would be about the same in his game as a 10-goal man in polo.

10-Goal Rating
Ten-goal players are rare. They are the perfect players. There have been only a dozen or so in American polo history. Maybe you'll understand just how tremendous Hitchcock was, and is, if you consider that he has won 10-goal rating in 18 of the last 21 years.

Tommy revolutionized polo, changing the offense from passlead, with 37 points scored in four games. Hugh Janssan, Sheboygan Central ace, is his closest rival, with 32 points.

That lusty little Junior Varsity conference is booming right along, without an undefeated team remaining. Manitowoc fell by the wayside last week, and now that reserve team is tied with Appleton and Sheboygan Central for the top spot.

Manhattan, Kas. —(P)—Big Elmer Hackney, the Mr. Muscle of Kansas State athletic teams, took it on the chin again today.

A wrist injury to his right hand, suffered last September in the game with Fort Hays State, virtually has ruined his chances of cracking the world shot record.

Torn knee ligaments suffered in the Colorado game ended his collegiate gridiron career.

The hand injury, said track coach Ward Haylett, affected a small bone which deprives the athlete of the wrist movement necessary in shot-putting.

Hackney established American and national collegiate records last spring, his best toss being 55 feet 11 inches. He had hoped to better the world mark of 57 feet, 1 inch held by Jack Torrance of Louisiana State.

Haylett said he hopes to develop his star into a left-handed thrower and is convinced the 205-pound athlete can win many points in that manner. He already has thrown the pellet more than 46 feet with his "wrong" hand.

Britain's tennis star, Kay Stammers, is seen with her fiance, Michael Menzies. They plan to wed soon.

Harridge, A. L. President, Found '39 Season a Pleasure

BY WILLIAM HARRIDGE
American Baseball League President
CHICAGO —(P)—The season of 1939 brought considerable satisfaction to the American league and to me personally.

Thanks to the inauguration of night baseball in three of our cities—Philadelphia, Cleveland and Chicago—the attendance figures practically equaled those of 1938, despite the fact the pennant was decided early in the season.

There is no doubt of night baseball's popularity. The fans enjoyed it immensely, not only because it gave many of them a first chance to see a game, but also because of the carnival spirit. I feel sure night baseball is here to stay when limited to seven games a season for each club.

Naturally, the American league is happy because it was the all-star game and the world series. It also took great satisfaction in the development of such star youngsters as outfielder Ted Williams and third-baseman James Tabor of Boston, pitcher Atley Donald and outfielder Charles Keller of New York, shortstop Louis Boudreau of Cleveland, outfielder Barney McCosky of Detroit and catcher Mike Tresch of Chicago.

The veteran American leaguers, however, were not to be denied. At the age of 39, Bob Grove of Boston and Ted Lyons of Chicago distinguished themselves by leading the league in effectiveness. Just a few years ago, they said Bob Grove was through. In 1939, he won 15 and lost 4. It was only recently I was informed that the main reason the White Sox retained Lyons was because the management was sentimental.

Nor should I forget another veteran, James Fox of Boston. Jimmie broke into our circuit in 1924. That is a long time ago in baseball. Three times, Jimmie has won the most valuable player award. He failed to repeat in 1939, but nevertheless was the runner-up to Joe DiMaggio and was excellent in hitting only by the Yankee star, despite the fact he was handicapped by a sinus infection and appendicitis, which finally sent him to the hospital.

The season of 1939 will go down in history as the one to which the most sentimentality was attached, because it was "baseball's centennial."

My belief is that one hundred years from now, baseball will be even more firmly entrenched as the national game.

Kimberly High School Five to Play Chilton

Kimberly — Coach Hamann's high school cagers travel to Chilton Tuesday night for a return game with Chilton High school. The Papermakers lost to the Bulldogs in their first encounter and will try to avenge this defeat.

The squad was definitely off form in the brilliant game, working the ball numerous times directly under the net, but failing to score. Overconfidence was considered largely responsible for this defeat. Chilton has a veteran squad and is out to add its second victory over Kimberly.

REVIEWING OUTDOOR SPORTS By Buell Patterson

It is always nice to look back over any year which has been an improvement over the years which have preceded it and 1939 was a good year for optimistic outdoor sportsmen and women. The fishing was up to par and the conservation authorities did a good job in re-stocking our waters, and the hunting was better. Ducks and geese particularly were on the up-grade in numbers.

Sportsmen as well as federal and state conservation authorities seemed to have come to a greater realization of what good sportsmanship and good conservation practice meant and to have cooperated more fully with efforts to improve conditions for the present generations and the future ones to come.

Efforts to protect ducks and geese in their breeding grounds, which included the setting aside of more protected territory and the provision for better feeding grounds, showed excellent results. The ducks now fly in greater numbers and have spread their flights over a much wider range of territory. Private individuals, clubs and other non-governmental groups have contributed much toward improving migratory bird conditions.

The fight against pollution of our waters so that game fish might live and increase has gone on in the past year with renewed vigor. The restocking of our game fish waters has gone ahead more scientifically and consequently more sanely. If we can only continue the progress made in 1939 during 1940 there is daylight ahead for outdoor sportsmen.

Even the oft berated lumber companies now show a greater consideration for beauty and for protecting the wonderful shore views of lakes and streams and seldom do they cut down to the very shores of our bodies of water. There is room for further improvement but the country is waking up to its obligations. The sportsmen and the business groups are both getting better.

Some have reported violations of the laws which have been made to restrict the gluttons in both the field of fishing and hunting. There is no doubt that there have been violations and that there will continue to be violations. There can be no doubt but that there has been good educational work done and that more of those who get their sport outdoors are conscious of their

Zeke Bonura Appears to Have Giants on the Spot

NEW YORK —(P)—Among the 37 players to whom the Giants announce they have mailed contracts for 1940 is Zeke Bonura, zealous first-baseman from old New Orleans.

Now, the Giants have got themselves into something of a mess about Zeke. They bought him from Washington for $25,000 last winter and paid him the not unhandsome salary of $15,000 for his season's work.

Manager Bill Terry soured on Zeke completely about a month before the close of the race. He took Zeke off first and let him do only an occasional chore of pinch-hitting down the stretch. Indications are that Bonura plays no part whatsoever in Terry's plans for 1940.

Yet the Giants, performers, have written the big banana merchant out another contract calling for $15,000. It is a very peculiar case, and one not calculated to make the Giants' front office happy.

Bonura has the Giants in a spot. He put them there during the recent big league convention, when the Giants were on the verge of trading him to the Phillies. The Phillies, being gun-shy, obtained permission from Terry to call Zeke long-distance and see if he would be willing to play for them at a salary considerably less than $15,000.

Zeke, awakened from a sound sleep, said he would be delighted to first-base for the Phillies. He said he would be reasonable about his salary, too. He said he thought $17,500 would be about right. The Phillies spokesmen gaped and hung up.

The news got around, of course, and since then the Giants have been left quietly in possession of Bonura. Washington wouldn't have minded having him back, for he is colorful and popular with capital city fans. But the clubs that could use Zeke can't afford to support him in the style to which the Giants have let him become accustomed.

The Giants don't want Zeke to get mad at them and hold out, because their chances of trading or selling him eventually would be reduced materially.

Conn Is Ready for First Heavy Bout

Figures He Should Have
Joe Louis' Crown
Within Six Months

BY SID FEDER
New York —(P)—The big boys in the boxing business may be interested to learn that de-blimped Billy Conn has it all figured out right now how he can be heavyweight champion of the world just as soon as Manager Johnny Ray "okays" a fight with Joe Louis.

The Pittsburgh pretty boy, who makes his bow as a full-fledged heavyweight in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night against one Henry Cooper, is so convinced of this that one fine afternoon within the next six months you are going to read where he has abdicated the light heavyweight championship to go against the big fellows exclusively.

"Those big guys," he pointed out with a goodly portion of disdain, "are all the same. They tire easy. When you fight one of 'em, you just let him wear himself out in the first few rounds. Then you just lean one hand against the top of his head, cock the other—and wham!"

"I love to fight those big clowns more than the guys my own size a guy who can box around with you always gives trouble. But never those stuffed pillows. They're all the same to me."

This is undoubtedly a large order for the "fighting harp" from the smoky city. Just one year ago yesterday, he showed up in New York for the first time, unknown and weighing a mere 168. Now he is king of the 175-pounders.

Billy's interest in the big boys is based not only on his confidence of success, but also on the financial return therefrom.

"That's where the real cocoanuts are," he explained. "And I need 'em now. I just bought a house for the family on Fifth avenue (Pittsburgh), and there are seven or eight of the folks there, including grandpa. The way those food bills run up—they must be eating a cow a day."

Lawson Little Is L. A. Open Victor

Butch Krueger, Beloit, Wins $218; Wehrle Trails With 303

Los Angeles —(P)—It may take the staid old Los Angeles Country club a year to recover from the beating it took from the rain, the trooping feet of thousands of golf addicts and Mr. W. Lawson Little in the 1940 Los Angeles open.

A steady downpour had reduced the club's already tough north course to the status of a quagmire, or pig-sty. Galleries had tromped the carefully manicured fairways into a pulp. And then came Lawson Little to hammer par into submission and wreck what had looked like a peaceful finish to the fifteenth annual open and victory for a large young man from Livonia, N. C. Clayton Heafner.

Little, hungry for laurels he hadn't found in nearly five years of professional campaigning, finished with a 72-hole total of 282, and a one stroke victory over Heafner.

Olin Dutra, Los Angeles, making a belated rally, finished with 283. Back of him and seven shots behind Little were Jimmy Hines of New York and Johnny Dawson of Hollywood, who won the amateur trophy for the second straight year.

Wilford Wehrle, Chicago amateur who held the lead after the first round, finished with a 79 yesterday for 303.

Alvin (Butch) Krueger, Beloit, Wis., pro. drew down $218 in prize money. Krueger finished with 215-75-280 which placed him in a five-way tie for fifth place among the money winners.

SULPHUR FROM EARTH

The old English word "brimstone" means "burn stone," and it is just another name for sulphur. Sulphur, or brimstone, is one of the few minerals which will burn easily. Coal is another mineral which can easily be made to take fire.

Pure sulphur has little or no smell, but when it burns it forms a gas with a bad smell. If a human being breathes in much of this gas, his lungs will be choked up and he will die.

If sulphur is placed in a metal container and heated, it goes through rather strange changes. It will melt, and in that way it acts like a metal, but keep on adding to the heat, and odd things will happen.

Sulphur turns into a yellow liquid at a temperature of only 230 degrees above zero Fahrenheit. At that point, the liquid is thin enough, but heat it to 482 degrees and it will become thicker than molasses!

If we heat the sulphur still more, up to 832 degrees, it will not be thick any longer—it will be a boiling liquid. The vapor can be taken from the boiling sulphur, and in a closed container it will turn into a yellow powder known as "flowers of sulphur."

In past times, Sicily supplied most of the world's sulphur. Great beds of it were found near volcanoes there. The island still has a store of sulphur, but most of the present-day output comes from Texas and Louisiana.

The sulphur beds of Texas and Louisiana were found deep in the ground, and it was not so easy to take out the sulphur as in Sicily. A good way to obtain it was worked out, however, by a clever man named Hermann Frasch.

After a hole was drilled through a deep layer of quicksand, Frasch set a "sulphur pump" to work. His idea was to melt the sulphur and then bring it to the surface.

The pump had several pipes leading down to the sulphur bed. One pipe took down "superheated water," which was far hotter than boiling water. Through another pipe, compressed air was shot into the melted sulphur. The result was that "foam of melted sulphur" rose through a third pipe.

When the sulphur foam rose to the surface, it was made to run into large tanks. Then it was treated until it turned into yellow powder, or into the sulphur rolls which are sold widely.

Sulphur is important in many fields. It is one of the things which make fireworks work; it is mixed with saltpeter and charcoal when gunpowder is prepared. Automobile tires and other rubber goods would not have much lasting value if sulphur were not mixed with the rubber.

SCORE HOME RUN
Moscow 47—Baseball, which at one time seemed unable to make any headway in Soviet Russia, has taken on a new lease on life and now will be played on a large scale.

Under a recent decision of the All-Union Physical Culture and Sports Committee, supreme sports authority, baseball equipment will be produced in mass in Soviet factories. The first seminar for coaches in the sport will be held in Moscow this winter.

This decision is regarded as a victory for Moscow school-boys, who clung to the game when it was first introduced while it died out elsewhere.

Red and White Will Perform Again on Home Floor Friday

New London—Coach Harold Isaacson and a squad of 17 New London High school basketball players will invade Menasha High school gymnasium tonight in an attempt to better the Bluejays for a share of third place in the Northeastern Wisconsin conference standings.

The tilt will be another test of New London's power in enemy floors which so far has cost the Red and White two close losses to two of the loop's toughest contenders, Neenah 26 to 28 and Shawano 34 to 32. Whatever the outcome, the home game with Kaukauna here Friday evening promises to be a feature battle of the cage season. It will be the first meeting of the two teams and New London will be on their home floor where they have been beaten rarely in recent years.

Stiff Opposition

Menasha has lost to Neenah and Kaukauna but flouts a 28 to 24 victory over the highly touted Indians and a 41 to 15 clean-up of Clintonville. They lost to Neenah by only 24 to 20.

Offensive tactics and rebounds occupied the squad at practice last night. The regular starting line-up will begin against Menasha with Ross and Melkijohn at forwards, Hammerberg at center, Poppy and Puetz at guards, Bud May, Art Genske, Dave Stern, John Sullivan and Bob Seering will be in reserve. The "B" squad will play a preliminary and making the trip for the purpose will be David Ruh-sam, Jim Jeffers, Jack Dent, Floyd Watkins, Paul Poepeke, Lynton Otis and Arden Smith.

Budgetary Study Plan Is Facing Great Obstacles

Most Congressmen are Anxious for Short Session During Election Year

Washington—In spite of the back-slapping for Senator Harrison (D-Miss.) over his proposal for a congressional budgetary study, not too much joint committee scanning of appropriation bills is to be expected at this session of congress.

Men who agree that the object is thoroughly desirable—and who have argued for the same thing in the past—say the practical obstacles are of such a stubborn type as not to melt away in a few days of wintry sunlight.

Time is one. The leaders would like to get this session out of town in a hurry. Members want to finish their chores and get home for the campaigns. The more quickly this is done, the fewer and milder will be the Democratic disputes. It would take 60 days for anything like a thorough study of appropriation measures by a senate-house committee. This would keep congress here far into the summer.

From the standpoint of the future there is a human equation to be considered. Few members would volunteer to come back to the capital ahead of the regular session to put in the weeks of necessary work to carry out the plan.

As a matter of fact, the leaders have a hard time getting enough subcommittee members into town ahead of sessions to put the appropriation bills into shape.

Through the first 77 years of constitutional government, congress had a system somewhat similar to that proposed by Senator Harrison. The ways and means committee throughout the early years of the nation's history had charge of both taxes and appropriations in the house.

During the Civil war, however, the committee became so busy trying to find new taxes that it had to turn over the business of keeping an eye on federal spending to another committee. Thus, the house appropriations committee was created.

Since then, the two functions have been handled separately.

Navy Considering 52,000-Ton Ships

med, the big ships could not negotiate the waterway at all.

Stark also told the committee that the navy planned to obtain 200 more two-engine, long-range bombers of the type which flew in a formation of 48 from San Diego to the Panama canal last year. Already 450 of these planes have been procured or ordered.

He reported, too, that the navy is experimenting with 18-inch guns for battleships. Its largest now are 16 inches.

Stark said the navy was seeking $4,000,000 to carry out much of the proposed improvement program at the tiny Pacific island of Guam which the legislators rejected last year.

Stark's statement caused an outburst of questioning by members of the committee who fought the Guam project at the session a year ago.

Stark said the request for the funds had been included in the budget for the 14th Naval district—the Hawaiian area—and explained that procedure was adopted because the navy did not need any congressional authorization for work in that district.

"We want you gentlemen to know exactly why we did it that way," Stark said. "There was absolutely no intention of trying to cover it up."

The work proposed, Stark said, is chiefly dredging for "underwater runways" in construction of breakwaters. The project defeated last year would have cost $5,000,000.

Reelect Officers of Cemetery Association

The Appleton Cemetery association, which operates Riverside cemetery, reelected officers and three trustees at its annual meeting last night in the office of Joseph F. J. Harwood, Jr., secretary-treasurer.

It was reported at the meeting that interments during 1939 were exactly the same number as in 1938. A report was also made on the 125 non-monument lots which the association laid out at Riverside cemetery during last year.

Color Plays Large Part in Daily Life of Average Civilian in Embattled Germany

BY LOUIS F. LOCHNER

Berlin—Life in embattled Germany presents itself to the average civilian in colors of the rainbow.

The citizen ventures out at night, sober; then, bang, he strikes a lamp post in darkened street. First lesson in color: Forehead, next morning, is black and blue, and possibly green.

Men who agree that the object is thoroughly desirable—and who have argued for the same thing in the past—say the practical obstacles are of such a stubborn type as not to melt away in a few days of wintry sunlight.

Time is one. The leaders would like to get this session out of town in a hurry. Members want to finish their chores and get home for the campaigns. Meanwhile, the gentleman's faithful spouse has spent about half an hour putting away all signs of last night's black-out.

Foods By Colors

Next she starts her daily shopping. To the red, blue and pink cards of the sort her husband has taken, she adds a white card for marmalade and sugar, a yellow card for fats, margarine and oil, and a brown card for soap. Not that she will be able to get all the articles she wants, her tradesman may shrug and say, "Sorry, madam, but our new contingent hasn't come as yet."

The color scheme is continued by other citizens standing in line with her. There's the choleric wife of the dentist next door; her face turns purple as she curses the war and wishes it were over. There's the young postman's wife; she turns red with anger because the butcher can't supply her. Her husband has been transferred from Poland to the western front, and she wants so badly to have a nice chop for Fritz during his one-day furlough.

Meanwhile the man of the house has reached his office. He tells his secretary to go out and buy some badly-needed towels. "Nothing doing," the frauentein says. "I haven't any Bezugschein."

Another of his peevish! To obtain a "Bezugschein" for towels, he must convince a hard-boiled official that the old towel is absolutely unusable.

And no matter how shapely a lady's leg may be, if she has one change of stockings, officials may refuse her authorization to buy a new pair.

This writer knows of a man who asked for a "Bezugschein" for a business suit. The official asked if he had any other suits. "Only the one I have on today," was the answer. The man thought the official was concerned about his every-day clothes.

"Please take a seat in the ante-room," he was told.

After half an hour he was called in again. On a hall-tree were his tuxedo and his dark, Sunday suit.

"Are these yours?" he was asked.

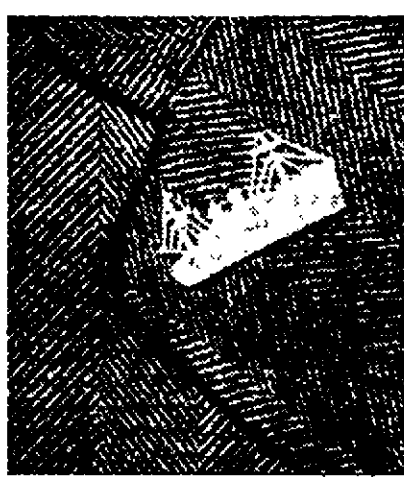

To his affirmative reply, the official said, "Very well, here is your 'Bezugschein' for a new suit of clothes. But you will donate these other two suits to the Winter Relief. You understand?"

Of course the man understood: these two suits were of good wool; the certificate entitled him to a modern suit made of wood-fibre mixed somewhat with wool.

In short, life for the civilian in Germany is slightly complicated. But six years of Nazi discipline have made the average German patriotic and meek. He may grumble about the war, but he bears it patiently.

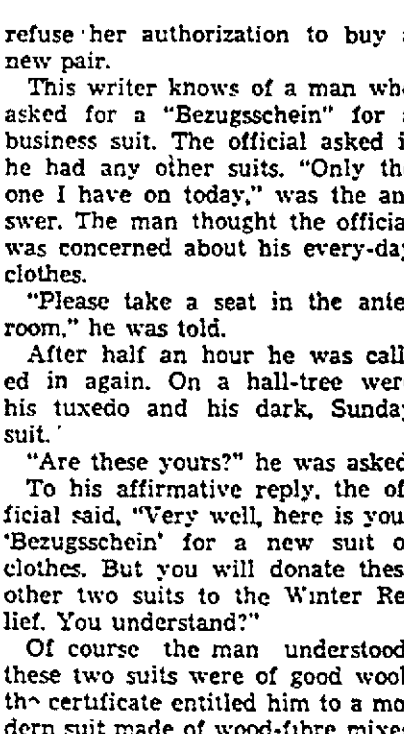

White garments help pick out traffic cops in blacked-out German cities.

Phosphorescent gadgets in lapels, like this, are the vogue among Germans who move in darkened streets.

As in all warring countries, cartoons like this one from Kladderadatsch help keep up spirit behind the front. Called 'Rest, Britannia, Under The Waves,' it's a comment on German success in the war at sea.

New York Stocks Rally After Dip In Early Trading

Extreme Setbacks are Materially Reduced At Close

New York—The stock market suffered a sinking spell today but revived partially at the last under belated buying treatment.

Modest advances were fairly well distributed at the start. Dealings were sluggish and, when the feeble rally failed to follow through, sufficient selling pressure appeared around mid-day to knock down leaders fractions to more than two points.

Volume picked up on the setback and, for a time, it looked as though a real old-fashioned wash-out was under way. The flurry proved short-lived and dealings soon slowed as support began to crop up for favorites. At the close extreme declines were well-reduced in most cases and, here and there, plus signs were in evidence.

Transfers were in the neighborhood of 700,000 shares.

Brokers attributed the forenoon tumble mainly to shelving of commitments by third holders who had turned bearish because of the recent inability of the market to climb out of the rut. Growing fear in some quarters of a greasy spring business recession also clouded speculative sentiment.

Wheat at Chicago was off 11 to 2 cents a bushel and corn down 1 to 1/2. Cotton, in late transactions, was 30 to 35 cents a bale in arrears. Bonds were mixed, as were European securities markets.

Prices of Wheat Slump to Lowest Mark in 2 Weeks

Early Gains are Wiped Out as Decline Is Resumed

Chicago—After an advance of almost a cent, wheat prices today resumed the decline which has been under way the past week, wiping out early gains and tumbling about 2 cents below previous closing levels. Prices were the lowest in two weeks.

Some selling here was attributed to spreading operations against purchases at Winnipeg, where wheat is much cheaper. Reports that the Canadian wheat board was offering grain there increased offerings in the Chicago market the decline uncovered numerous stop-loss orders which were put into execution, augmenting the selling.

Buenos Aires prices declined about 2 cents.

Receipts were: Wheat seven cars, corn 69, oats 19.

Kaukauna Title Hopes Hinge on Weekend Games

Squad Drills for Conference Tilts at New London, Shawano

Kaukauna — After definitely stamping themselves as a North-eastern conference threat by overwhelming Menasha last week, high school cagers are preparing for the season's crucial weekend. Two games on two successive nights, Friday at New London and Saturday at Shawano, will go a long way toward deciding the 1940 tilt.

If Kaukauna can ring up two wins the schedule will from then on be in their favor, with the loop's three strongest fives, Neenah, Shawano and New London, to be met on the home floor. The Kaws are now in second place, a game and a half in back of Neenah.

Comparing a couple of scores, Kaukauna seems to have a good chance for two wins. Menasha and Neenah both whipped Shawano badly, while Kaukauna beat Menasha 35 to 18 and lost to Neenah by only three points on the Rockets' floor. Both Neenah and Shawano have taken the measure of New London.

Daily Scrimmage
It's been several years, however, since Kaukauna won on the big New London floor, and with a veteran Bulldog five back the Kaws aren't thinking about Shawano until Saturday. Scrimmages are on the state every night this week, plus free throwing practice. The Kaws made only 3 of 10 against Menasha, and can trace more than one early defeat to this weakness. Scoring records for 9 games this season show Bill Alger topping the squad with 68, followed by Joe Bloch, 51, Karl Giordana, 35, Don Bisek, 34, Junior Swedberg, 26, and Bill Tassin, 12. Kaukauna has made 226 points, with opponents counting 198.
